SCREENS FOR THE ARTISTIC TOUCH.

The dual virtues of a screen commend it highly for the summer home. Artistic and practical, it lends a finishing touch not easily secured by any other piece of furniture. No one disputes its decorative value whether applied to an interior or to an out-door "piazza room."

A good screen justifies a fair outlay, but let it not be of the ordinary sort—if it possesses the "Titus Individuality" you are safe.

The One Illustrated Has An Imported Tapestry Top.

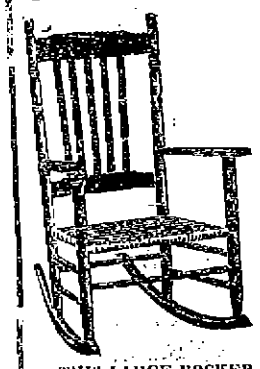

It is picked at random from a large stock and as a worthy offering will well serve to demonstrate the advantage of choosing here.

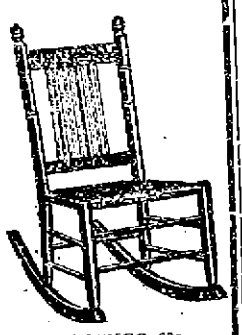

The frame is of selected oak in weathered finish 68½ inches high and 54 inches wide. The three top panels are of imported tapestry in attractive colors, showing effective rustic scenes. A special offering at a special Titus price $4.25

BALLINGER MAKES TRIP TO BEVERLY.

Confers With Taft on New Reclamation Service.

Secretary Anxious to Take Work Out of Newell's Hands.

BEVERLY, Mass., July 5.—Secretary of the Interior Ballinger arrived in Beverly this morning, lunched with President Taft at Burgess Point, and this afternoon was engaged in a conference with the chief executive on the subject of the re-organization of the United States reclamation service. The beginning of work under the new $20,000,000 issue of certificates of indebtedness, authorized to complete irrigation projects in the West, also was discussed. The usual crop of resignation rumors came to Beverly with the Secretary, but he soon put a quietus on these. "I am not a quitter and never have been," he declared. "I did not bring along any resignations and don't intend to leave any." As soon as the reorganization work is underway, under the new order of things, Secretary Ballinger will leave Washington for a visit to several of the Indian reservations and then will go home to Seattle for a brief stay and have an opportunity to look over his private affairs, which have been neglected for a year or more.

The conference with the President probably will be concluded this afternoon and Mr. Ballinger hopes to be back in Washington tomorrow. The Secretary would not discuss today whatever effect his call upon the President might have upon the status of F. H. Newell, director of the reclamation service, or the part he is to play in the re-organization of that service. It is no secret that Mr. Ballinger is anxious that the reclamation work shall be taken out of Mr. Newell's hands, but as a matter of fact this purpose seems already to have been accomplished by act of Congress. It was remarked today that Mr. Newell has practically become a civilian island, entirely surrounded by army engineers. No project can be carried forward without a report to the new board of engineers.

Reports that a complete re-organization of the Interior Department might follow the Secretary's visit to Beverly are said to be entirely without foundation. Mr. Ballinger declared that nearly all of the divisions of the department are in excellent shape. Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, whose summer home is only a few miles away, was in Beverly today on a shopping trip. He did not see the President and his visit had absolutely nothing to do with the vacancy of the Supreme Court bench. Justice Holmes will attend the Fuller funeral services at Sorrento, Me., tomorrow. It has not been determined this morning whether or not President Taft would be able to make the trip.

GUNBOAT AILEEN ARRIVES.

Vessel to be Used by Rhode Island Naval Battalion as Practice Ship.

PROVIDENCE, July 5.—United States gunboat Aileen, which will be used by the Rhode Island naval battalion as a practice ship this summer, arrived here today from the Brooklyn navy yard. She was in charge of Commander William C. Wise of the state naval militia and manned by Rhode Island men.

NEW YORK "BLACK BELTS" GUARDED.

Police Still Keep Active Patrol Through District.

Negro Killed in Argument Over Jeffries.

NEW YORK, July 5.—Police were still keeping active patrol today in the "black belts" of New York, to check any further sporadic race trouble engendered by the outcome of the Jeffries-Johnson fight. The resentment caused by the defeat of Jeffries at the hands of a negro caused scores of street fights, negro hunts through the streets, and petty outbreaks all through the night. One negro was killed early today, his assailant escaping, while several badly bruised negroes are in a hospital from injuries and fright.

The black and tan zone was the scene of the only race killing reported. George Crawford, a negro waiter, had an altercation with a white man over the question of what Jeffries in his prime could have done to Johnson. The white man ended the argument by striking Crawford over the head with a blunt instrument. The negro died later in the hospital. Nelson Turner, a negro, was nearly lynched for yelling to a crowd of white men in the "San Juan" section, "We blacks have gone over you whites and we're going to do more to you." Then Turner drew a revolver which misfired, and in a trice the crowd was upon him. He was being hauled to a lamppost when the police rescued him.

DEATH OF CHIEF JUSTICE FULLER.

Comes Suddenly in Room Where His Wife Died.

Aged Jurist Was in Good Health Until The End.

SORRENTO, Maine, July 5.—Messages of condolence from friends for and wife of Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller, who died suddenly yesterday from heart trouble at his summer home here, continued to arrive today. None of these were made public, however, upon request of Mrs. Nathaniel Francis, the only one of Mr. Fuller's five daughters who is here.

The other four daughters are hurrying from Tacoma, Washington, Chicago, Washington and New York. All except Mrs. Hugh Wallace of Tacoma, who will stop at Chicago, are expected to be here in season for the simple funeral tomorrow afternoon. The body will be taken to Chicago for interment.

Chief Justice Fuller died Monday in the very room in which his wife breathed her last six years ago. The death of the venerable jurist was a complete shock to his friends here, none of whom had even suspected that he was in failing health. He breathed his last in the arms of his daughter, Mrs. Nathaniel Francis of Washington.

THE LATE CHIEF JUSTICE FULLER.

Not only did the leader of the American judiciary round out his days in the same room where his wife had passed away, but it was in the state of his nativity, the state he loved so well, that his long life ended. Chief Justice Fuller was 77 years old. With the justice when he died were his daughter, Mrs. Francis; his granddaughter, Miss Aubrey Francis, and Rev. James E. Freeman of Minneapolis, a neighbor and friend of the family.

Chief Justice Fuller arrived at Sorrento June 25 from Chicago. He had a bad turn in Chicago the middle of June, but since he came here his health apparently had been very good, considering his advanced age.

He enjoyed listening to a sermon yesterday morning in the Church of the Redeemer by Rev. Mr. Freeman. Last night when he retired he was in excellent spirits, and not the slightest indication that there was serious trouble with his heart was observed.

Mrs. Francis, with whom he lived, was awakened at 5:45 a. m. by a feeble cry from her father. Upon looking at him and hearing the words, "I am feeling very ill," she realized that he was in a serious condition and telephoned to Dr. S. E. Phelps of West Sullivan to come as quickly as possible. He hurried over the three-mile stretch of road in his automobile, but failed to arrive before his famous patient had passed beyond the need of medical aid. Mrs. Francis also called in Rev. Mr. Freeman, who occupies a neighboring cottage, and he and Mrs. Francis were with the chief justice when he breathed his last, which was within a few minutes of 6 a. m. Death came very peacefully and he retained his faculties until the end, recognizing those about him. He made no statement.

Congressman Francis Burton Harrison of New York, a summer resident here remarked that he had noticed Mr. Fuller had been in failing health the past six months or more.

Chief Justice Fuller had been a summer resident of Sorrento the past 17 years, all that time occupying "Malvastra," by which name his cottage was known. His favorite retreat was a small bungalow, which he called his "den." This is situated in a beautiful grove of fir and evergreen and surrounded by handsomely arranged flower beds.

This learned man, who loved his native state so well, more than once expressed the hope that he would die in the room in which his wife passed away on that August day six years ago. His wish was realized.

The BEE HIVE.

A short time ago, one of the largest and most exclusive waist manufacturers of New York city came to us with this proposition:

"I have a lot of waists on hand on account of overproduction and if you will agree to buy them I will close them out at about half price."

We readily agreed, and we are glad we did, for in the lot are waists of the styles that are in the lead for prettiness of finish and effect. No woman seems to have too many waists and all women know a pretty waist and a good one for the money, so come and see if we were not right in buying these waists at a much lower price.

JEFFRIES KNOCKED OUT.

Johnson Wins Heavy-Weight Championship in Fifteen Rounds.

RENO, July 4.—"Jack" Johnson, son of a slave mammy, won the undisputed heavy-weight championship of the world today by battering James J. Jeffries, hero of half a hundred battles, into a cowering mass in the fifteenth round in the arena here, before 20,000 eager spectators from the world over.

It was a knockout for Jeffries—a clean knockout by two fists that pounded flesh like battering rams—though in pity the white man was not counted out by the referee.

Johnson played with his man almost from the very start. Each time Jeffries took the aggressive he was decoyed craftily to the rope, and then a black fist shot out for a heavy thud upon his body.

Thus it was from the beginning to the end. The sinuous, agile negro, gleaming like a black panther, was master of the situation at every turn. As he himself put it, the battle was between a bear and a gorilla—and the gorilla won with that mowing, sweeping reach which gave his opponent no chance after the second round.

In the end the 20,000 persons, banked tier on tier, stared for a heart-beat's time at a heaving white figure prostrate on a square of pink canvas and tried to realize that what may be the last chapter in American prize ring annals had been written before them.

The big man whose bulk sagged low the white rope over which he lay was James J. Jeffries. Over him, smiling, alert, his smooth, black body glistening in the brilliant desert sunshine, stood Jack Johnson, the new king of the ring.

No ring contest ever drew such an attendance, and never before was so many thousands of dollars fought for or paid by the sport-loving public to see a fight. The men, and for that matter the 600 or more women scattered through the vast audience, journeyed thousands of miles to Reno, many have gone hungry and without beds. It was the greatest collection of men of the prize ring and those associated with the sport, of sporting writers and other writers whose names are known in fiction, politics and graves that has ever been drawn together in this country except at a national political convention.

From noon until the curtain went down on this battle of the Fourth of July thousands of persons sweltered and baked under the direct rays of a July sun to see the trial of skill, strength and endurance prevented by this combat of the two recognized peers of the prize ring. Then, after 69 minutes of concentrated and intense interest, the thing they had looked forward to for over a year was over. Something between a sigh and a groan went up to the blue sky, but there was little complaint.

These keen sporting men from every corner of the earth realized that they had seen a great and game man die, and that a past master of ring science wore the championship belt. They had had their money's worth. All questions were answered, and now for the quiet walks of the daily life again.

Through the 15 rounds there was little cheering. When the end came and Jeffries dropped dazed and inert a church-like stillness fell over the multitude. Men stood on their hot benches, their faces tense and drawn, waiting for the fight to be resumed.

Not even when Sam Berger, Jeffries's manager, accompanied by the big fellow's seconds and several valiant newspaper men, jumped through the ropes and surrounded the prostrate fighter did the watching crowd indicate by word and action that the battle was over.

No heed was paid to the victor except by his friends at the ringside. The eyes of the onlooker remained on Jeffries.

Realization finally came when, after a long interval, Jeffries was fanned and rubbed into consciousness and assisted to his feet and led away.

MIDDLETOWN.

Memorial Service for Bishop McVickar with Special Music at the Berkeley Chapel.

A memorial service for the late Bishop McVickar was held Sunday morning at the Berkeley Memorial Chapel. There was a celebration of the Holy Communion, Rev. Latta Griswold being assisted by Rev. James P. Conover of St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H. Rev. Mr. Griswold took as his text Hebrews 11-10: "For it became him for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through suffering." Through the death of the Bishop a widespread loss is felt; personally, by the church and by missions, by all philanthropic organizations; and not only in this state but in various states, the length and breadth of the country. He has left us the example of a wide charity, a zealous public-spiritedness, a devout Christian, and a pure and spotless life.

During the offertory Mrs. Henry W. Newton of Buffalo sang as a solo "Oh for the wings of a dove," by Mendelssohn. Mrs. Newton appeared in the vestments of the church singing in the chancel at the organ. The chancel rail and bishop's chair were draped in black. On the altar were choice blooms from the gardens of Mrs. T. J. Emery. Rev. Mr. Conover was the preacher at the afternoon service, which was resumed for the summer

A cross of lilies of the valley and a large cluster of white sweet peas were laid on the grave of the late Admiral Thomas in the Berkeley church yard Sunday, the first anniversary of his death.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Hughes are entertaining Miss Hattie Hughes of Scotland, Conn., Mr. Hughes's daughter, and Mrs. Allie Savage of Boston, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Hughes.

Mr. Harry Huntington of Hartford, Conn., has opened the Huntington Cottage on Indian avenue and will be joined later by his father, Rev. John T. Huntington.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. H. Schwartz and family of Providence were guests over the Fourth of Mr. and Mrs. E. Marion Peckham on Prospect avenue.

Miss Edith Norman Hunter, superintendent of the Middletown schools, left this morning for Boston to attend the forty-eighth annual convocation of the National Education Association of the United States, at Harvard University. She was accompanied by Mrs. E. A. Peckham, a member of the school committee.

Never has Middletown known so quiet a Fourth. Much of the customary work went on as usual and the nature of the day was little in evidence except by the flying of the national colors.

Mrs. Hugh P. Morgan and her two daughters, of Providence, are at Mrs. Joseph F. Albro's for a few days. Mr. Morgan spent Sunday and the Fourth here, returning Monday evening.

Miss Louise Diman of Providence is guest of her sister, Miss Emily Diman, at St. George's School.

Rev. and Mrs. Clayton E. Delanator and their son Edgar spent the Fourth in Providence. Edgar Delanater left Tuesday for Plymouth, Mass., where he will spend the summer with his grandparents. Before returning, Mrs. Delanater will visit her parents Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Billings, at West Bridgewater, Mass.

Mrs. J. Willis Peckham and her sister, Miss Arvesta Champlin, returned Sunday from a three days' visit in New Bedford, where they were guests of their sister, Mrs. George Sturtevant, and also attended the graduating exercises of their niece, Miss Gertrude Sturtevant, who recently completed her high school course.

HOW LIVE STOCK AFFECTS FARM PRICES.

[A. G. Leonard in American Review of Reviews.]

The price of land is high mainly because the price of corn is high, and the price of corn is high chiefly because so much of it is in demand for the purpose of feeding live stock, while there is a world shortage of live stock, which keeps up both relative demand and prices for meats in all countries because population everywhere is growing faster than the supply of meat animals. Take away from the farms a considerable share of their live stock, and it would follow that such enormous quantities of corn would be thrown upon the market as to reduce its price below the cost of production, and such a general drop in the value of corn would surely lower the value of lands all over the corn belt, and hence would affect seriously the value of all lands.

It follows, therefore, that if the farmers of the United States would continue to receive remunerative prices for their annual corn crops, and if they would maintain the present general values of farm lands throughout the country, they must keep up or increase the supply of live stock on farms. Of course there is always the added and very important consideration of preserving land values by preserving and increasing the fertility of the soil, which can be naturally and permanently done only by raising plenty of live stock on the farm, as every up-to-date farmer knows.

The above is a serious subject for thoughtful study by all who are interested in land values, including railroad managers, land dealers, colonization and irrigation companies, and others besides the farmers themselves. In short, to increase and improve the supply of live stock in the country, especially of meat animals, is absolutely essential to keeping up the production and price of corn; to maintaining the value of lands, and to preserving the fertility of the soil; while all of these are necessary to continued agricultural prosperity, which is now well recognized as the basis of the general prosperity of all classes and of all business interests throughout the nation.

FOR INVESTIGATING DISEASE.

The Otho S. A. Sprague Memorial Institute Established in Chicago.

CHICAGO, July 2.—Announcement is made of the establishment of the Otho S. A. Sprague Memorial Institute, for the scientific investigation of the causes of disease, with an immediate endowment of $1,000,000. The trustees say there are prospects for increasing the endowment to several million dollars. Provision for establishing the institute was made in the will of O. S. A. Sprague, a wealthy Chicago merchant, who for several years prior to his death in February, 1908, was a resident of Southern California. A charter for the new institute was granted by the state. Albert A. Sprague, a brother of the philanthropist, said at his summer home in Pittsfield, Mass., that the detailed work of the institution would be taken up on his return to Chicago in the fall.

AMATEUR AVIATION RECORD.

Harmon's Continuous Flight of Two Hours, Three Minutes.

NEW YORK, July 2.—Although an amateur, Clifford B. Harmon broke all American records for length of time in the air in a continuous aeroplane flight at Mineola, Long Island, this evening. He remained aloft in a Curtiss biplane two hours and three minutes, and only descended when his supply of gasoline became exhausted.

The best previous record for duration of flight was 1 hour and 58 minutes and 32 seconds, made by Louis Paulhan at Los Angeles in January last.

Harmon ascended before an enthusiastic crowd at 5:45 o'clock and touched earth again at 7:48. During the flight he made 57½ laps over the course, and on the forty-fifth lap he diverted from the course and flew over the grandstand. Making a complete figure eight, he returned to the coure, where he reversed and circled from north to south instead of from south to north, as he had started.

Try This RICHMOND

Suds-Maker Free

You simply turn the faucet and the RICHMOND Suds-Maker delivers thick, hot suds. It does not in any way interfere with the hot water faucet and can be easily attached to it. It gives you instead, two faucets—one for clean, hot water—the other for thick, hot suds.

Think of the dozens of ways this ingenious device will cut down the work in the kitchen! Learn what it means to save hundreds of steps every day—to always have thick, creamy soap suds on tap. The "Richmond" Suds Maker gives you any quantity of soap and water thoroughly mixed in scientific proportion—it is always ready to meet your instant needs. It puts an end to the drudgery of dish washing—simply place dishes, silver, glassware under its creamy suds for an instant, then just rinse and wipe. It puts an instant, automatic end to waste, to painfully soap dishes, to the nuisance of using up the odds and ends of soap. Use any kind of soap.

Just call on the plumber whose name appears below and ask to see the RICHMOND Suds-Maker. He will let you take one home to try. Use it ten days—then if you think you can spare it, return it, for the trial places you under no obligation to buy. This is your chance to learn about the greatest convenience, money and time saver you can install in your kitchen. Call today.

JOHN W. DANIEL.

He Was of the Older School of Democracy and Will be Remembered Chiefly as An Orator.

[New York Tribune.]

The eminent Virginian who died at his home in Lynchburg was the sole survivor in the Senate of a group of Democratic leaders of exceptional capacity who sat in that body during President Cleveland's first term. They represented, so far as the South was concerned, chiefly the class which had distinguished itself in the service of the Confederacy. They belonged to the older school of Democracy taught by Breckinridge and repudiated by Douglas, a few modifications being made to meet the unavoidable consequences of the war. Among them were Vance and Ransom, of North Carolina; Hampton and Butler, of South Carolina; Gordon and Colquitt, of Georgia; Pugh and Morgan, of Alabama; Walthall and George, of Mississippi; Gibson and Eustis, of Louisiana; Bate and Harris, of Tennessee; Reagan, of Texas and Berry, of Arkansas. Closely allied with these men in association and sentiment were the following border state Democrats: Vest and Cockrell, of Missouri; Beck and Blackburn, of Kentucky, and Kenna and Faulkner, of West Virginia. It was a formidable array of men and talent and capacity for leadership. Some were orators of high rank; all understood the arts of political incitement and persuasion.

It is a striking evidence of the transformation which the Democratic party of the eighties has undergone that Mr. Daniel, the last survivor of that brilliant group, leaves no successors in the Senate minority to whom its traditions can be entrusted. Although the senior Democrat in the upper house (his service of 23 years March 4 last exceeding by eight years that of the next ranking minority member, Mr. Bacon (Georgia), he exercised no rights of priority and avoided rather than sought the honors of party leadership. By age, distinction and capacity he was entitled to be the head of the party in the Senate. But possibly a realization of his detachment from many of the ideas which the Democratic party has been pursuing to the last two decades led him to prefer to pass along to others the unwelcome duty of guiding a Senate minority uncertain of itself and torn by insubordination and factionalism.

Mr. Daniel could recall the days when the Democratic party was self-consolidating, when ideas held it together and leadership in the Senate was only nominal, since all party forces were working in harmony. After the disastrous explosion in 1894 of the anti-protection issue, which had kept the Northern and Southern wings of the party together, the Virginian threw himself with zeal into the movement to unite the South and the Far West on the free silver coinage issue. He was one of the originators of the coalition which aimed at nominating Mr. Teller at Chicago in 1896, but had to take Mr. Bryan as a substitute. When free coinage also proved ineffective as a basis of party victory the Virginia Senator lost interest in it and earnestly worked at the St. Louis Convention in 1904 to eliminate it as Democratic doctrine. But conditions in Democratic politics in the last eight years have not been such as to encourage attempts at leadership on the part of Democratic Senators. The policies of the party have been framed elsewhere without much concern for the approval or co-operation of the Democratic leadership in Washington.

Mr. Daniel will be remembered chiefly as an orator. He had stood alone in the Senate in recent years as a representative of the classical school of oratory. But he had the discretion to moderate the formality of that school, oppressive to modern ears, and to appeal with more directness to the altered tastes of the present day. He may have lacked the fire and imagination of George G. Vest and the occasional wonderful felicity of John T. Morgan; but his speeches were always balanced in form, vital in matter and welded together with exquisite art. He was an orator, if not of the first rank, yet of high rank, and as such in these days it will be difficult for either Virginia or the nation to replace him.

PORTSMOUTH.

At a recent special meeting of the town council the following were drawn to serve as jurors when called upon: Grand, Benjamin A. Chase, George B. Harrington, Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Isaac B. Macomber; petit, Benjamin Hall, William C. Dennis, William F. Grinnell, Frederick P. Hicks, Edward B. Ayler, Nahum Greene, Frank C. Cory, William H. Tallman. In canvassing the list, it was found that there are 105 registered voters.

Miss Carolyn D. Anthony, who has had the grip; her mother, Mrs. William W. Anthony, both sick in the same house, and her sister, Mrs. Charles G. Clarke, are all improving.

A pretty sight seen recently was a fine doe and young fawn, in the woods adjoining "Glen" and "Sandy Point" farms. The mother had been seen about there for some time, and this week the little one was with her. The mother did not seem to be wild and kept in the open road, but the fawn kept to the woods.

Mrs. William J. Harker has been guest of Mrs. Constant W. Chase.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Russell and their two children, Lucy and Leonard, of Pawtucket, arrived Saturday, to spend two months with Mrs. Russell's mother, Mrs. Lucy M. Phinney, except Mr. Russell, whose vacation will be limited to one month.

Mrs. Charles Holloway has been guest of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel A. Carter at Walnut farm.

Mr. William G. Brown of Slocum attended the funeral of Mr. William Sherman. While here he was guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin T. Brown.

Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Wiston of Newport have been guests of relatives in town.

Mr. and Mrs. William Feeney (Miss Myrtha Brigham) are visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brigham. They are to make their home in a cottage on the estate, "Caprice," of Madame Bonat on Indian avenue.

Mr. William H. Mayer, who was recently hurt by a horse, is able to be out.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Fish of Dorchester, Mass., arrived Saturday and spent the Fourth with Mr. Fish's father, Mr. Lawrence F. Fish, and family at "Shady Nook Cottage."

Mr. Alfred J. Mott, who had a light attack of the grip, is better.

It is thought by dwellers all along the road from Newport to Stone Bridge that more automobiles passed over the road Sunday than ever before in one day. Some hours they seemed almost as closely connected as a train of cars, and as the electrics ran double-headers several hours, it seemed to be the noisiest Sunday ever known in Portsmouth.

Mrs. Charles H. Wilson, a returned missionary from South America, will sing at the meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Christian Church [illegible]

Mr and Mrs Henry R. McCrone have returned to [illegible] day being guest of Mr. and Mrs. Gideon W. Almy.

Miss Helen W. Sisson was guest Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Grinnell.

The engine which has been used in building the macadamized strip on the West road, drawing its house, tool house, numerous wheeled gear and other machinery, passed along the East Main road Saturday, making a long procession, toward the Stone Bridge, having completed the work.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sewall have had as guests Miss Frances Scarry, nurse at Dr. Truesdale's private hospital, Fall River and Mr. Sewall's brother, William Sewall of Rockport, Mass.

Miss Katherine Molloy, principal of the Candace Street Grammar school, Providence, is spending a few days at "Maplewood Farm."

Mrs. Bradford Norman is in New York, guest of her brother.

Mr. John Adams, who has been spending a week in Newport, has returned.

St. Christopher's lawn party will be held the week following that of St. Mary's Guild, the third week in July.

The Ladies' Aid of the Christian Church met with Mrs. Abram L. Rathbone. There were 12 present, the time being spent in needlework and socially.

Mr. George Hollister of Hartford was guest over the Fourth of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver G. Hicks and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Albertice Tallman and their four children, of Wakefield, have been spending a few days with Mr. Tallman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Wesley Tallman.

Mr. Arthur Smith gave a good display of fireworks Monday evening, in front of his residence.

Miss Harlette K. Hughes, who is spending the summer in Scotland, Conn., has been for a few days with her father, Mr. William M. Hughes.

Mr. William Sisson, who is very sick with rheumatism, is reported as not so well. His mother is helping care for him.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe was guest Sunday of Rev. and Mrs. Hugh K. Birckhead at their summer home "Eastover," near "Sandy Point Farm."

Mr. and Mrs. Marion McAllister Smith have been guests for a few days of Mr. Smith's sister, Mrs. Augustus L. Wilbur at "Lamont Farm."

Mrs. Dailey and her daughter, Veronica Dailey, of Providence, have been visiting Mrs. Dailey's brother, Mr. Cornelius Sheehan, and family.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

Seven men had narrow escapes from being burned alive or drowning off Block Island early Monday morning when the New York gasoline launch Bashi-Bazouk caught fire, burned to the water's edge and sank. The seven escaped death by fire when five jumped into the small donghy, which was being towed astern, filling the little craft, while the two others jumped into the water and kept themselves afloat by hanging on to the side of the little rowboat.

Curtis Sprague, a Block Island fisherman, was on his way to the fishing grounds, saw the launch burning and went to the rescue. The two in the water were well-nigh exhausted. Sprague took all the party on his craft and carried them to Block Island, where they landed at the New Harbor. They came from there to Newport by steamer.

The rescued men, who absolutely refused to give their names, said that they left Rockaway Beach, N. Y., Sunday morning for this city. They were five miles from land when the craft caught fire through accidental ignition of the gasoline. They confessed that had it not been for Sprague's prompt action they might have had difficulty in reaching land, owing to the fact that the two men in the water, hanging on to the sides of the dinghy, considerably impeded any effort to make headway. The water was smooth at the time of the accident, else the fire might have resulted more disastrously for the members of the party.

PERSONALS.

....Justice William H. Moody of the United States Supreme Court, who has been a patient at the Corey Hill Hospital in Brookline for several months past, was taken to Gloucester Saturday and will spend the remainder of the summer in a cottage at Magnolia. The justice stood the trip well and expects, with the change of atmosphere and conditions, to gain rapidly.

....Henry Clay Weeks, the first man to start a systematic campaign for the extermination of mosquitoes in this country, is dead of general debility at his country home at Bayside, Long Island. He was 66 years old and an architect by profession. His hobbies were killing mosquitoes and protecting shade trees. Years ago he began pouring oil on swamp land near his estate, greatly to the amusement of neighbors. He keep up his crusade against the mosquitoes, and it was largely through his efforts that the American Society for the Extermination of Mosquitoes was formed. He leaves an estate valued in the millions.

....Dr. F. J. Furnivall who died in London Saturday, was a many-sided man. Besides being a scholar and a leader in social reform he was an enthusiast over athletics, particularly rowing and also a vegetarian. He celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday on the fourth of February, 1909, by rowing a racing shell on the Thames from Putney to Mortlake, the course over which the Oxford-Cambridge races are rowed. Dr. Furnivall was a member of many learned societies and was editor of the Oxford dictionary. In 1845 he built the first two narrow sculling boats in England. At the time of his death he was president of the Amateur Rowing Association.

....Brigadier General William L. Marshall, who recently retired as chief of engineers of the army, has been appointed consulting engineer to the Secretary of the Interior in the reclamation service, a position created by Secretary of the Interior Ballinger to assist him in solving the engineering problems involved in completing the reclamation projects now under way. It is explicitly stated that General Marshall's appointment does not indicate any change in the personnel of the field force of the reclamation service. He will act, it is said, in an advisory capacity to the Secretary of the Interior on the work of completing reclamation projects under the provisions of the act of June 25 last, authorizing the issuance of $20,000,000 of certificates of indebtedness for that purpose.

The Sagamore Beach Sociological Conference practically exhausted the list of desirable things in the adoption of its platform. It declares that "It seems imperative to us that all who really desire the coming of God's Kingdom on earth, the establishment of social justice and the realization of brotherhood," should consider a long list of questions, some of which might not be considered altogether desirable, if the conference intends to accomplish anything it should start with a few and let the rest come later. The Gathered-In Skirt.

This skirt, gathered into a tight band at the foot, measures scarcely two yards around, yet the skirt does not look bulky or out of proportion. This suit is made of a fir green material. The short coat is trimmed with Persian banding which shows subdued red, blue and bronze shadings.

THE FLAG.

[Katharine Lee Bates in Lippincott's.]

It is not fair to see, our starry banner?
You, as an artist, who have pledged allegiance
Only to Beauty, find it crude in color,
Stiff in design, void of romantic symbol,
Unvenerable? England's golden lions,
Japan's chrysanthemum, imperial flower
Gleaming in red as on a field of battle,
The holy cross of Switzerland, outvalue
To all impartial, pure, aesthetic judgment
The flag our patriot folly terms Old Glory?
I cannot tell. Perhaps I never saw it.
When on the seas or in some foreign city,
Nay, here at home above a country schoolhouse,
I find it floating on the wind, it beckons
My heart into my eyes. It is not bunting,
Mere red and white and blue—that starry cluster,
Those gleaming folds; it is the faith of childhood,
The unison of strong, rejoicing millions,
The splendor of a vision men have died for,
The passion of a people vowed to freedom.

A train on one of the trans-continental lines that runs through Kansas City and is usually late was reported on time a few days ago.
The young man who writes the particulars concerning the trains at that station put down his statistics about this train: "Number 615—from the West—on time."
Then he wrote underneath: "Cause unknown."—[Saturday Evening Post.

"THE AMERICAN FLAG."

[James Grant Wilson, in Century.]

From Charles P. Clinch (1797-1880), the last survivor among the intimate friends of Drake and Halleck, I heard more than a quarter of a century ago some interesting incidents concerning the delightful companionship that existed for almost a decade between Drake and Halleck, the Damon and Pythias of American poets. Mr. Clinch told me that one evening in May, 1819, he went by invitation to Drake's house in Park row, next door to Beekman street.

Going upstairs we found Drake and Halleck, when the former remarked: "Charlie, you are just in time to hear a new 'Croaker' that I was about to inflict on Fitz," whereupon Drake read "The American Flag," which he had written, or at least completed, that day. At its conclusion came the inquiry, "How will that do, messieurs?" "Admirable," exclaimed Halleck; "but I believe you could better the last four lines." "Well, suppose you suggest a better stanza," said Drake. Halleck rose from his chair, and, walking to the table, sat down and wrote on the inspiration of the moment, without the least hesitation, the lines which were immediately adopted by Drake, who remarked: "Fitz, those are fine, and I accept them as being better than mine." But few of Drake's poems were changed or corrected in any way. Before we separated that night I made a copy of the poem (signing it Croaker & Co. by Drake's request), which Dr. Langstaff carried the following morning to the office of the "Evening Post." and in the afternoon of the same day, May 29, 1819, the poem appeared in that paper, with a complimentary introduction by the editor, William Coleman.

CURE YOUR KIDNEYS.

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinary disorders, lameness, headaches, languor, why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney diseases, cure yourself now, before diabetes, dropsy or Bright's disease sets in. Read this Newport testimony:

John L. Cookinham, 20 Poplar Street, Newport, R. I., says: "I was greatly benefited by Doan's Kidney Pills procured from Wright & Hay's Drug Store and can therefore recommend them. I suffered almost constantly for two years from kidney complaint and rheumatism. There were such terrible pains in my back at times that I could scarcely turn over in bed and many nights I could not sleep at all. Rheumatism made its appearance in my right limb and gradually extended into my arms and shoulders. Doan's Kidney Pills went directly to the seat of my trouble and brought me entire relief."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

HOW TO CURE ECZEMA, PIMPLES, AND DANDRUFF.

We desire to say that when we took the agency for ZEMO we were convinced that it was a valuable remedy for Eczema, pimples and dandruff. Yet, we must frankly admit that Zemo has far exceeded our expectations as a treatment for skin diseases. We are pleased to state that we shall continue the agency as ZEMO has given splendid results wherever recommended. Our customers like ZEMO too, because it is a clean vegetable liquid for external use.

ZEMO effects its cures by drawing to the surface of the skin and destroying the germ life that causes the disease, leaving the skin clear and healthy. It does not soil the clothing or linen and can be used freely on infants.

With every purchase, we give a booklet on skin diseases explaining in simple words how any person can be cured at home of any form of skin or scalp diseases by this clean, scientific remedy. [illegible]

JUDGES AND POLITICS.

Early in the last century the rapid spread of rampant democracy led to a general revulsion against an appointive judiciary; most of the states made their judges elective, and in some cases the terms were not very long. William Jennings Bryan, finding the courts usually arrayed against his opinions, insisted that the Supreme Court of the United States should be as responsive to public opinion as the House of Representatives, and to that end demanded that the justices should be elective and their terms should not be too long to make them attentive to every fluctuation in public opinion.

Among most reflective persons the disadvantages of a judiciary elective by the people have been seriously considered. With a judiciary chosen by popular vote it is almost inevitable that the judges should be selected under strictly partisan influences. It is dangerous enough if a party convention nominates for judges only members of its own party, and that is almost invariably the case; but as the conventions are generally dominated by a state boss, by whom the nominations are dictated, there is grave danger that the candidates for the bench will not only be partisans, but that they will be selected for party services irrespective of their legal acquirements.

In New York one of the most eminent of the supreme court judges was refused a re-nomination because he would not make a campaign contribution of $15,000, which comes perilously close to selling the nomination, and in Philadelphia there are judges of the higher courts who had had scarcely any practice at the bar when named for judicial positions, but had been useful to the bosses.

At a recent meeting of the Pennsylvania Bar Association a committee recited the dangers of the elective judiciary—dangers of partisanship, dangers of the prostitution of judicial offices and dangers of the sale of nominations—but failed to see anything which the association could do about it unless an appeal was made to it to condemn some particular nomination. Of course there is little else that the bar can do, but the committee's report should furnish food for thought to Pennsylvanians.

NATURALIZATION DELAYS.

Immigrants are pouring into this country so fast that we cannot make citizens of them as rapidly as they apply for that privilege. In New York state particularly, where the bulk of the immigrants settle down, the courts are a year or more behind the docket in this respect, with no apparent hope of catching up unless more judges are appointed for this purpose, or new courts established to attend to this special duty. This delay is a source of hardship to the applicants as well as a misfortune to the nation. It means that those who desire to become citizens of the United States are obliged to pay much more for the privilege in fees for lawyers and witnesses and in absence from their own employment than if their cases could be acted upon quickly, and also that the country is deprived of the citizenship of many persons who are desirable additions to the national body, though from distant foreign lands. Both these features of the delay are of sufficient importance to warrant the adoption of some means of hastening the action of the courts in this particular.

One cause of this accumulation of naturalization cases beyond the ability of the courts to give them prompt attention is the fact that much more care is now exercised in questioning applicants than was formerly used. The result is that more questions are asked and better proofs of birth and other biographical facts by the testimony of witnesses is required. These matters necessitate the expenditure of more time on each case, making it impossible to make citizens today in the rapid-fire, wholesale way of the past. This new exercise of care, however, is desirable and has resulted in the addition of a better class of citizens and the exclusion of many who were not desirable or had not yet attained the proper conditions before seeking full citizenship under this government. It is not possible to exercise too great care in this matter of making citizens and that fact is recognized and action taken accordingly. The delay thus caused is to be regretted, but not at the expense of a better citizenship.

The great reason for the inability to keep up with the procession of applicants for naturalization by the courts, however, is that they are so crowded with other cases that they can give but a limited amount of time to the work of making citizens, and this condition has led to the suggestion that special courts be established to attend to these duties. There is good ground for such a course, in the fact that an injustice is done to the would-be citizens and to the country by the present delays. There are objections on other scores, so that it is not at all certain that this plan will be adopted to any great extent, if at all. Some other may be devised in accordance with which the dockets of naturalization cases can be cleared and kept reasonably up to date, instead of crowded with an accumulation of cases dating back more than a year in some instances. That something must be done soon to remedy the difficulty is not to be doubted.

The most desirable thing in connection with immigration of such large proportions as is being experienced in this country is that this mass of foreigners shall be as quickly as possible assimilated into the citizenship of the country, and thus made to adopt the customs and laws of the land. The final feature in this process is the naturalization of the new-comers, and in view of the desirability and practical necessity of this action it is folly to delay that process simply for lack of courts and judges to perform the functions requisite before citizenship can be granted. To delay in this matter is to affect adversely those who seek citizenship and to cause injury also to the nation, which so long as these strangers have been admitted requires for its best interests that as soon as possible they shall be made members of the great family of patriotic supporters and defenders of the government. It is the part of wisdom, therefore, speedily to devise some plan by which this delay can be obviated and all who wish to become citizens may do so promptly.

THE NATIONAL SMART SET.

Philadelphia is considerably disturbed, according to its newspapers, by the announcement of a person who claims to be the general secretary of the National Society of Scions of Colonial Cavaliers, that Philadelphia has only 19 persons entitled to be regarded as members of the real swell circles. Since his original and alarming announcement he has consented to add one person, giving the Quaker City an even score, and explains that he did not refer to persons entitled to be considered the elite locally, but to be in the national smart set. This explanation of course softens the matter a little for Philadelphia, which is quite satisfied with itself and is too well convinced that it has the most exclusive society in the United States to care whether or not any of its best people seek admittance to the charmed circles of New York and Newport.

Small as the Rev. Mr. Nicoll's list is, it creates more astonishment in Philadelphia by what it contains than by what it excludes. One fifth of the 20 names on the list consists of a former butcher, his wife, son and daughter-in-law. The head of the family was an ordinary dealer in roasts, chops, short ribs and sirloins until he made considerable money and then fell in with a smart promoter who had a genius for making millions out of street railways, as a result of which they are going into bankruptcy in New York, have had their water pumped out of them in Chicago and are not making a very good show for themselves in Philadelphia. It has been generally supposed that wealth must be at least one generation old in order to admit its possessor to real, exclusive American society, but it appears that the butcher himself, as well as his son, has the entree of the national smart set. If Rev. Mr. Nicoll knows what he is talking about, Philadelphia society, dominated by people whose ancestors established "the assembly" about 160 years ago, is of course deeply interested.

Governor Hughes's name is now mentioned for the chief justiceship of the Supreme Court. While President Taft is as yet unwilling to make known his intention, it is regarded as practically certain that he is considering the governor's name for the place. Unlooked-for developments may cause a change in the President's attitude, but as matters stand at present Governor Hughes is foremost in the President's eye. There will be no appointment until after the funeral of Chief Justice Fuller.

Crackers to right of one, crackers to left of one, crackers in front of one, snapping and roaring. Not alone on the "sane Fourth," but as early as mid-afternoon on Sunday and more noticeable Sunday night than Monday night. There were some large crackers too, and some one was selling them. Mayor Boyle issued orders but they were not heeded, and as it happened the mayor was one of those sick persons who would have benefited most from a sane Fourth.

The Blue and the Gray marched together in the Fourth of July celebration in Springfield, Mass. Ninety members of A. P. Hill Camp of Confederate Veterans of Petersburg, Va., on invitation of Commander James Anderson of E. K. Wilcox Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of that city, participated in the celebration. The Confederate and Union Veterans were one, in fraternal spirit and display of patriotism. The war is evidently over at last.

In his Fourth of July speech at Cambridge, President Taft foretold the freedom of the Filipinos. He did not attempt to intimate when the time would come, contenting himself with the assurance that when it does come the United States will not stand in the way.

Bristol had a big Fourth of July celebration and Colonel Samuel Pomeroy Colt was the central figure in it. Has the fact that there is to be a vacancy in the United States Senate next winter any connection with the renewed activity in public affairs of the gentleman from Bristol?

President Taft was a part of the Fourth of July celebrations in four Massachusetts cities—Cambridge, Boston, Everett and Chelsea—and received a continuous ovation on his way from Beverly to and between these cities and on his return.

The death of Chief Justice Fuller removes from active life an eminent jurist, who as head of the Supreme Court of the United States for 22 years had had an important part in the decisions of many difficult phases of American law.

Generally, it was a more sane Fourth than for many years. The celebration was not devoid of accidents, but they were apparently less numerous and less damaging than formerly. The agitation for a quieter Fourth has had its effect.

The big fight is over, and after all what has been gained? The world is none the better for the contest.

MR. M'CROHAN'S FUNERAL.

Large Attendance of Knights of Columbus, Eagles and Friends at the Service.

The funeral service for Eugene P. McCrohan, who lost his life Friday morning while inspecting wires at the Astor cottage, was held Sunday afternoon from his residence on Maitland court to St. Joseph's Church. At both places there were large numbers in attendance and in the vicinity of the church many others gathered to await the procession which escorted the body on its way to St. Columba's cemetery. The service was conducted by Rev. James Mahon, the pastor, the choir singing during the service.

The members of the Newport Council, Knights of Columbus, and By-the-Sea Aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, of which the deceased was a member, in large numbers, escorted the body out Broadway a considerable distance, leaving a body guard to accompany it to the cemetery. The bearers were James J. Palmer and Daniel Roach, representing the Knights of Columbus; P. J. Drake and Andrew McMahon, the Eagles; John Halpin and William Foley, the Telephone Exchange, and John Burke and John Mahoney, personal friends. The burial was in St. Columba cemetery, beside the body of his father, who died several years ago.

Among the many floral tributes was one from the fellow employes, one from the Knights of Columbus, one from the Eagles and one which bore the inscription, "Chums," from intimate friends.

THE MAGAZINES.

The complete novel for July in Lippincott's is "The Lady Thalia," by Henry C. Rowland, author of "Germaine," "Sea Scamps" and other books. "The Lady Thalia" is a romance of southeastern Europe, where an adventurous American and a titled Britisher quixotically come to the aid of a Balkan princess in distress. As a result, they are plunged into all sorts of dangerous enterprises. There is some excellent character drawing in the story, and not a little humor.

Mary Roberts Rinehart is one of a number of writers who are represented by short stories. Her offering is a Fourth-of-July story, called "Grandfather Bixby, Nurse." Elsie Singmaster contributes one of her Pennsylvania-German tales, entitled "The Eternal Feminine." Others are "The Toss," by A. R. Goring-Thomas; "The Triumph of Jim's Dad," by James William Jackson, and "The Cleverness of Mrs. Bland," by Catharine Houghton. "The Pink Emerald; or, The Tragedy of Aspen Beach," is a travesty on the modern popular novel, by John Kendrick Bangs.

Mrs. John Van Vorst's paper on "The Markets of Paris" is interesting. Then there are "Wanted: a Merchant Marine," by Willard French; "What is an American?" by Warren Barton Blake; "The Festival of Injury," by J. B. E.; "The Supremacy of the American Farmer," by William D. Lindsay; "A Municipal Problem," by John H. McNeely; "July," by Thomas L. Masson; and "Folks," by Ellis O. Jones.

Poems, including "The Flag," by Katharine Lee Bates, and the humorous department, "Walnuts and Wine," complete the issue.

The North American Review for July presents a table of contents of live topics by authorities. The former Viceroy of India, Lord Curzon, has an article on "British Rule in India" which will be concluded in the August issue. There is the editor's note on Lord Curzon and his work, which precedes the article. Archbishop Ireland makes a series of surprising statements in regard to the work of a Protestant body in Italy in a forceful article entitled "The Methodist Episcopal Church of America in Italy." The position of the United States in relation to foreign powers is outlined in an article by the well known writer, Charles Johnston, entitled "The Foreign Policy of the United States." Louise Collier Willcox contributes one of her literary studies in an appreciation of Bjornstjerne Bjornson. The science of eugenics is discussed by Robert de C. Ward under the title "National Eugenics in Relation to Immigration."

Jane Addams, head of Hull House, Chicago, writes authoritatively on "Charities and Social Justice." An article by the late Cesare Lombroso is "Priests and Women's Clothes." This is followed by Mr. Howells in a characteristic study entitled "A Political Novelist and More." A kindly philosophy is outlined in the article by Professor Abram S. Isaacs under the title "Gentler Living." An interesting study of the practical working of the votes of women in New Zealand will be found in Hugh H. Lusk's "The Woman's Vote." George Edward Woodberry's poem "To an Indian Boy" will delight many. Sydney Brooks presents one of his studies of conditions in England under the title "The New Reign in England." The Review reprints an article on Goldwin Smith, a critical survey of his mind and works. Quite a list of recent fiction both at home and abroad will be found in the "Books Reviewed."

NOT A BOX ALARM.

But There Were Plenty of Fourth of July Stills, and All From the Up-Town Section.

Newport's fire record for the Fourth began Saturday and ended at an early hour last night, with more than the usual number of stills and not a single box alarm. The calls were all from the up-town district and the down-town Chemical had an easy time.

Saturday one got by every one but the firemen. This was at 9 a. m. and was for a chimney fire at 9 Smith court—no alarm and no damage.

Saturday afternoon, just before 4 o'clock, Chemical 1 and Hose 2 went on a still alarm to 67 Thames street, where a little fire in a room had caused some concern, but did not require much exertion on the part of the firemen.

Sunday morning at 3:25 there was a real explosion, a Greek fishing boat exploded and caught fire and Chemical one responded. There was some loss at this fire.

Monday, just after 10 o'clock, a slight fire on the roof of the home of Sheldon H. Curtis, corner of Spring and Prospect Hill streets, caused a run for Chemical 1 and Hose 8. It came at just the time when the parade was turning into Thames street from Washington square and a break was made in the line of the Naval Brigade to allow the apparatus to pass through. This was easy, but it was not so easy to clear a space among the spectators and carriages for the apparatus to go up Touro street, though the congestion was finally cleared in safety.

At 1:20 Monday Chemical 1 and Hose 2 attended a slight fire in the Chinese laundry on Thames street, just above Marlborough.

At 5:30 there was another. Charles Thurston, 20 Tilley avenue, a member of Steamer 4, furnished the roof, and a firecracker furnished the provocation. No loss.

At 7:52 James Sheehan's residence on Heath court was the locus. At this place Mr. Sheehan had a fall in trying to put out the fire, and was apparently injured more than was at the time thought.

Finally at 10:05, came the last one, from Frank Pearson's, Appleby street—another case of a shingle yielding to the heating effects of the Fourth. This called for the first use of chemicals of the day.

FELL—RANDOLPH.

Society Wedding at Narragansett Pier Unites Two Old Families of Philadelphia.

Independence day at Narragansett Pier was notable for a society wedding which united two old families of Philadelphia. The bride was Miss Dorothy Randolph, daughter of Mr. Philip S. P. Randolph, and the bridegroom Mr. John R. Fell, son of Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer by a former marriage.

"Wild Field Farm," the Randolph villa, a mile below the Pier, overlooking the ocean, was the scene of the wedding. The interior of the house was decorated with American Beauty roses, vines and palms. The ceremony, which was witnessed only by the immediate relatives, was performed on the piazza, facing the ocean. An improvised altar of white roses and greenery was arranged in the centre of the piazza. The bride and her attendants descended the broad stairway and from thence through an aisle of white ribbons. She was accompanied by her father, who gave her away. Her attendants were her sister, Miss Hannah Randolph, and Mrs. A. J. Antelo Devereaux, Mrs. Howard H. Henry, Misses Elizabeth Phillips and Edith Wayne, Mrs. Charles A. Munn, Jr., of Philadelphia; Misses Celestine Hitchcock and Constance Perkins, of New York, and Miss Dolly Lynch, of Lakewood, N. J.

Mr. Fell was attended by his cousin, Mr. A. Drexel Paul, as best man, and the ushers were Messrs. Philip S. P. Randolph, Jr., brother of the bride; W. Fraser Harrison, Harrison Tweed, William Devereaux, of New York; Charles Cadwallader, Alfred Devereux, John Walsh and William H. Reeves, of Philadelphia. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Thomas Francis Doran, of Providence, assisted by Rev. Father Raftery, of Narragansett.

The bride wore a gown of white satin with long court train. Rare old point lace, a family heirloom, ornamented the bodice and formed panels at the sides. The skirt was ornamented with orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and orange blossoms. She wore also a diamond necklace, the gift of the bridegroom, and a diamond necklace was the gift of the mother of the bridegroom.

The bride's attendants were gowned alike in white chiffon, with over-dresses of white chiffon, trimmed with Vichy lace, the over-dresses being edged with the same lace. They wore also pale blue girdles and carried gold arm baskets filled with pink rosebuds. Their large hats were of white lace, with bands of pale blue satin and wreaths of pink roses around the crown, finished with big puffs of lace in the crowns.

The reception was attended by 300 guests. Assisting the couple in receiving were Mr. P. S. P. Randolph and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer. A wedding breakfast was served under small tents on the lawn, and at the bride's table were 18 guests, members of the bridal party.

Mr. and Mrs. Fell departed in the early evening on board steam yacht Georgiana II for a cruise along the coast. Later they will return to "Wild Field Farm," at Narragansett. Mr. Fell is a nephew of Mr. Anthony J. Drexel and first cousin of Lady Maidstone, of London. His bride is devoted to out-of-door sports and an accomplished horsewoman.

THE ROMANCE OF THE LIGHT-HOUSE.

[C. H. Claudy in the Woman's Home Companion.]

Keep a good light—that is, one which is always reliable, always on time; which never goes out, except for those unavoidable instants when a chimney burns. Have each glass of the hundreds flashing like a diamond; to have every part of the equipment immaculate; never have the light go black and be reported—these are simple ambitions and the code of laws of the lightkeepers. And nothing, nothing, must keep the light from being lit, and staying lit. And no excuse, save that of an act of God, can avail a keeper if his light is black and it becomes known.

There is a tale which was told to the writer of an old, old light-keeper—who had been keeper of a First order, Second order, then a Third order and finally a Fourth order light, at his own request, where he could pass the remainder of his days with the lesser duties of the smaller light. "Jim was a fine keeper," said the old keeper. "He was 32 years on the Point Blank light and never once had his light 'gone black' nor anything said against him. He loved his light next to his wife—He loved his wife second and his light first he would be there. yet. Both his assistants were off, one sick, t'other away somewhere, and Jim was sitting up nights with the light and doing the housework, days, 'cause his wife was sick, too. And it told on him. And one night Jim dropped off to sleep in his chair under the light. He slept 20 minutes. When he woke, the place was full of smoke and his light was black. Chimney had melted. The light was reported to Washington, and Jim had to go to the board. He said they took him in like a brother and treated him like a friend, but he knew he had to go. They said they hated to do it, that they knew his record was fine, but that while they were sure it would never happen again, still for the good of the service and what effect it would have on the rest of us, he had to go. His heart is broken, and it killed his wife. But they are two; the lights are for all of them—" and the old man waved his arm toward the bay and its teeming life of ships."

AN INDIAN MIRACLE.

[Sarah Endicott Ober, in The Christian Herald.]

The announcement of a new cult in these times of religious unrest may not be of great interest, but the evolution of a new religion, having its inception in a recently barbarous people, and being an inter-mixture of Christianity and savagery, is indeed of rare interest and importance.

The Shaker religion originated with John Slocum and his wife, Twana Indians, who lived on the Big Skookum, near Olympia. In 1882 the man was very sick. He and his wife had heard the Gospel in Rev. Myron Eell's Mission, but as they were ignorant Indians, they had little conception of it. When John Slocum thought death was near, he insisted upon calling in an Indian "medicine man." His wife protested, urging him to keep faithful to the religion they had adopted, and not return to the old heathen ways; but the man could not be dissuaded, and the medicine man came and began his incantations. The poor wife, in sore distress, went away into the woods, and there prayed in agony to the "white man's God" for the salvation of her husband. She did not know how long she wrestled in prayer, but the Indians assert that she was there three days and nights. There came a vision to the poor soul that cleansed her from her sins, and filled her with strange ecstasy. When she entered the house her husband had apparently been dead for six hours. The Indians were wailing over his body. The "medicine man" fled at her approach. The story is told that the seemingly dead man arose, that of John Slocum's after life, and that of his wife, was upright, clean and free from their former vices and sins.

The "new religion" spread like wildfire. It now reaches nearly every tribe from California to Alaska, and has gone over the mountains to the Yakimas, Spokanes, and Nez Perces. At first it went to wild extremes and all sorts of miracles were claimed. It was mixed with the old Tamihaowus, or Indian rites, and has little of Christianity except the belief in Jesus Christ. But every year it has lost something of the barbarous beliefs and worship, and taken more of Christian principles and rites.

THE WEATHER.

BOSTON, July 5, 8 A. M.—Forecast for Boston and vicinity—Fair tonight and Wednesday; light variable winds.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

Light to moderate rains have occurred during the past 12 to 24 hours in most of the southern states, and light showers have prevailed in Montana. Other portions of the country have experienced fair weather. A moderate area of high pressure covers the Lake region and the middle and north Atlantic coast states except Maine. The pressure is also slightly above the normal over Florida. A depression of moderate intensity is central over North Dakota and Manitoba. The temperatures over the country are near the normal for this season. In New England the minimum temperature ranged during the past 24 hours from 44 at Greenville, Maine, to 62 at Boston. In New York at 8 a. m. it was 72, Washington 70, Jacksonville 78, St. Louis 70, Chicago 64, St. Paul 64, Des Moines 66, Kansas 68, Denver 60, San Francisco 52, and Portland Oregon, 52.

BOUGHT BY P. H. HORGAN.

Controlling Interest of C. M. Bull and Mrs. Smyth in the Perry House Property.

There is a rumor on the streets to the effect that Mr. P. H. Horgan has purchased a controlling interest in the Perry House property. Deeds of such a transfer do not appear on the records at the City Hall, but it is known that Mr. Charles M. Bull spent the Fourth with his family in Middletown. The report has it that Mr. Bull and his sister, Mrs. Smyth of Philadelphia, were to have sold their interests in the property to Mrs. William T. Bull, the surgeon's widow, but for some reason this sale was not effected. Then Mr. Horgan came in and made negotiations and a satisfactory agreement was made. The report has it that Mr. Horgan is to give $9,000 for the interest to be transferred to him. Mrs. W. T. Bull is the party holding the remaining interest in the property.

It is not understood that this deal carries with it the Opera House, of which the ownership is the same as that of the Perry House, the whole of which is taxed for $35,300. While the official records cannot be given as authority for the sale, The News has information from authentic sources which confirms that part of the report which has to do with the fact that Mr. Horgan has become interested in the property.

SHORT MOTION DAY.

Another Sale of the Stafford Dryer Property Ordered, to Settle the Difficulties.

The superior court stole a march on all but the initiated this morning, when Judge Tanner made an early start from Jamestown and had completed business and adjourned the July motion day session about an hour before these sessions usually begin. It opened about 9:35, and lasted about half an hour.

There was more of the Batonyi litigation. This time it was one of the cases brought by Mrs. Batonyi against Mr. Batonyi, another of the "replevin" suits, and Mr. Nolan, counsel for Mrs. Batonyi, moved to change the sureties on the bond(one is always required in such a suit), wishing to substitute for the original sureties a surety company. Mr. Batonyi was not present, but there was a long letter or communication from him. The court thought that the bond being an essential part of a replevin case, to change it would affect the standing of the case, and the matter was allowed to drop.

There was also a re-appearance of the differences over the Stafford Dryer property on Thames street, which seem now about to be permanently settled. Not long ago Mr. Cummings, forced out of the store which he had occupied and which is now torn down, bought an interest in the adjoining Bryer property. There were questions as to the interests of the heirs. Now the court has ordered another sale of the property, and the title will thus pass to somebody and the proceeds can be divided as the court directs among those interested. Mr. M. A. Sullivan was appointed guardian ad litem for Harold B. Walcott, a minor interested, and Mr. Levy was appointed master to make the sale. The case is brought by William H. Walcott and another against Annie R. Cummings and another. Mr. Koehne is for plaintiffs, Burdick and McLeod for the other side.

Several cases were assigned for trial in October. One was Dennis Shanahan vs. Henry Hass. Four—J. Mirman, Charles Walner, Ernst Voigt and Harry Zeldman vs. Michael De Fasco—were set for trial October 6. They are appeals from the district court.

Mr. Levy, counsel for defendant, desired a new trial in Jeremiah A. Corcoran vs. F. J. Buensle. Mr. M. A. Sullivan was present for plaintiff. As the case was tried before Judge Lee, the motion for new trial could not be heard by Judge Tanner. It may be heard in Providence.

There was another matter, understood to refer to the estate of the late John N. A. Griswold. It is an equity case between John A. Van Rensselaer and others, and the Newport Trust Company, apparently a friendly suit to have the court direct the disposition of funds held as a trust under a will. No one made answer in the case, and a decree "pro confesso" against all respondents was entered by the court. Mr. Harvey is counsel for the complainant.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

—An excursion train from Boston is due Wednesday at the usual time, from 11:30 to 12. It is arranged in connection with the annual meeting of the National Education Association, now in session in Boston.

—Fishing schooner Eva and Mildred was in today with 32 swordfish, which Fred Harty bought and shipped to Boston. This is the largest swordfish arrival of the season. Otherwise things were quiet. The Whoona landed a few scup.

—A cable from London says Mr. Alfred G. Vanderbilt was in Paris last week and took part in the meet of the French Four-in-Hand Club, driving one of the coaches. With Mr. Vanderbilt were Mrs. George Law, Major and Mrs. Canning and Mrs. Gwynne.

—The regulars will go into camp next week for a week's life on the tented field, prior to the arrival of the National Guard. With the going into camp will begin a season of work with strict attention to duty and few chances to leave the posts on pass.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. Torsche of Holyoke, W. Nace of Atlanta, Ga., Mr. and Mrs. F. Craig, E. Plasso and Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Murray of Boston, W. H. Coggeshall of New Bedford, Mr. and Mrs. D. Kennedy of New York, J. Keefe and Mr. and Mrs. T. Williams are registered at the United States Hotel.

—A woman collapsed under the heat on Thames street Saturday night and was assisted into a drug store by Chief Crowley. There was nothing like a breeze blowing during the early evening hours. The street and the shops were crowded, and it must have been a strenuous night for the salespeople, for it was hot on the street and must have been hotter in the stores.

—Arrivals at the Perry House include Admiral Seaton Schroeder, U. S. N., Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Ford, Providence; W. H. Angell, New York; Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Baxter, Worcester; Mr. and Mrs. Martin Frabisier, Englewood, N. J.; A. L. Jacoby, Washington; C. F. Moore, Gardiner, Mass; Rev. W. W. Greene, Church Creek, Md., and Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Goodman, Port Washington.

—A third case in the Greek lobstermen trials came before the district court this morning, when James Raftak was arraigned for pulling lobster pots without a license. This is the same as the two before the court Friday afternoon, and in accordance with the arrangement then made with Mr. Barney, counsel for the Greeks, Mr. Levy, representing the state, had the case continued to July 26.

—At Trinity Church Sunday morning Rev. Stanley T. Hughes, the rector, delivered a eulogy on the late Bishop McVickar, taking as his text Psalm 1:3-4: "And he shall be like a tree planted by the water side, that will bring forth his fruit in due season. His leaf also shall not wither and look, whatsoever he doeth it shall prosper." Rev. Emory H. Porter, D. D., also preached a memorial sermon Sunday morning.

—Registers at the Casino include Mr. James G. Blaine, 3d., Mr. T. Mellvaine, Mr. H. C. Drayton, Mr. Herbert Parsons, Miss Audrey Hoffman, Mr. Pembroke Jones, Mr. G. M. Congdon, Mr. Dudley Davis, Mr. D. B. H. Brooke, Jr., Mr. Edwin C. Potter, Mr. Harry Walters, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Knapp, Mr. J. E. Wade, Mr. Stephen M. Noyes, Lieutenant Kenneth G. Castleman, U. S. N., Mr. D. B. Fearing and Mr. John R. Abney.

—About 3 o'clock Monday morning, when Watchman Johnson of the Old Colony car barn was making his rounds and ringing up the clock, he discovered a little blaze under the store of John O. Brightman, adjoining the car company's property. With a few buckets of water and an extinguisher he put out the fire. Foreman Thomas says he had closed the barn a few minutes before and everything in the vicinity seemed to be in good order, except the arc light in front of the shop, which was not burning.

—Sunday afternoon Rev. William L. Essex preached his first sermon as assistant minister of Trinity parish, taking as his text Exodus III:7: "And the Lord said, I have surely seen the affliction of my people, which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry by reason of their taskmasters, for I know their sorrows." Rev. Mr. Essex made an excellent impression, his sermon being characterized by helpful thoughts and a good English style, while sincerity of manner also made it impressive.

Fourth of July St. Clare Home Fete a Great Success.

Grounds Attractive, Large Variety of Features and Long List of Awards.

The fete given at the St. Clare Home during the day and evening of the Fourth was well attended and afforded a variety of entertainment, a considerable sum being raised for the benefit of the home and the work of the White Sisters. It was given under the direction of the Queen's Daughters, with Mrs. J. E. Sullivan, president; Miss Mary Sullivan, secretary, and Miss Mary Maher, treasurer, as the official heads. They were assisted by a large number of men and women in the preparation of the grounds and in various capacities.

The grounds made an attractive appearance, with the booths arranged about the sides, each decorated in red, white and blue. The large refreshment tent and dance tent were decorated in yellow and white, the color of the Queen's Daughters. There were all sorts of booths for the sale of fancy articles, cane booths, fish ponds, candy tables, bowling alleys, soda fountain and flower stands, each with its special attractions, and all had a large share of patronage during the day and evening.

In the afternoon the Seventh Artillery band gave a two hours' concert, and in the evening the Howard orchestra played for dancing in the pavilion. In the evening also the electric illumination was a feature. Red, white and blue electric lights were used in great profusion to illuminate the booths, and to form a canopy over the grounds. For this numerous strings of lights were stretched from the sides to a central pole, strings of small flags alternating with the lights, making a pleasing effect.

The articles awarded at the Queen's Daughters' table were as follows: Irish medallions, Mary Cottrell; cake, Mrs. Daily; basket of fruit, Nell Callahan; doll (blue), William Donnelly; Dresden doll, Mrs. Cummings; Italian scarf, Miss Dwyer; picture, Marion M. Kearney; telephone index, M. Gooley; cracker jar, Miss Dwyer; doll, Minnie Rohde; Blue urn, Mrs. Clifford; cake, Mrs. Denniston; guess basket, J. B. Connelly; dressed hams, Mrs. J. J. Kirby.

At the Sodality table the following awards were made: Gold chain, Mrs Toomey; White hat pin, K. G. Flinn; silk umbrella, Patrick Kelly; bust of Plus X, Mrs. Walsh, Bradford; sofa pillow, No. 1, Katie Cody, "Pen Craig;" umbrella stand, M. E. Hayes; box of candy, J. Johnson; Turkish rug, C. A. Hilcken; basket of fruit, Mary Last; box of cigars, P. J. Lynch; book, D. O'Sullivan; green vase, M. Driscoll; box of cigars, John Harpin; Moor's head, J. H. Cremin; veil roll, Thomas Boyle; flower vase, Miss Sheehan; box of cigars, M. Boyle; powder box, Margaret Butterton; blue pillow, B. Conheeney; gold bracelet, Mrs. E. O'Brien; plate, Mrs. Adams; baby's jacket, P. Gallagher; ten pounds of tea, John F. Titus; day nursery, Eddie P. Dunn; baby's socks, D. McCrae; doll, K. Collon; doll No. 2, Helen Fagan; gold ring, J. Martin; baby's socks, L. Maher; crucifix, Mrs. Terence Gorman; collar and cuffs, J. S. Martin; burnt wood frame, Catherine Kelly; 25 bushels of oats, 371.

The receipts of the festival already amount to about $2,500.

TWO NEGROES ATTACKED.

Shot and Seriously Wounded by Unknown White Men.

NEW ORLEANS, La., July 5.—James Lee and Emile Thompson, two negroes, were shot and seriously wounded by two unknown white men here last night. According to the wounded men's story, the white men approached them with the declaration "Johnson won," but we will get even with all negroes." Lee was shot in the head and Thompson in the arm and side. Both probably will recover.

STRUCTURE TORN DOWN.

John Mitchell Not Allowed to Speak from Non-Union Built Platform.

CHARLESTON, Penn., July 5.—Rather than permit John Mitchell, former president of the United Mine Workers of America to speak from a platform constructed by non-union men, carpenters destroyed the structure Saturday and worked all day Sunday to re-build one from which their former leader could address them at the Fourth of July celebration here. The first platform was finished Friday night and during Saturday it was learned that two of the builders were non-union men. This was reported to the celebration committee and the structure was ordered torn down. Union carpenters re-constructed it without pay.

—Mr. Bradford Hathaway is visiting his aunt, Miss Elizabeth B. Peckham.

—The Misses Linscott of Boston spent the Fourth with Mrs. Gardner Blanchard Perry.

—Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. C. Taylor sailed for Europe today on the Kaiser Wilhelm II.

—Mr and Mrs. Samuel Clark of New York are visiting Mrs. James Clarke on John street.

—Colonel John Jacob Astor and his son Mr. Vincent Astor, will arrive at "Beechwood" July 15.

—Mrs. Robert J. Allan of New Rochelle, N. Y., is visiting Miss Carrie L. Gibson on Bliss road.

—Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Broadbent of Woonsocket spent the Fourth with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pearson.

—Mrs. Emile S. Bruguiere and Mr. Louis S. Bruguiere have arrived at "Castlewood," near Coddington Point.

—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bickerton and Mr. and Mrs. William Helme of Pawtucket spent the Fourth in Newport.

—Mr. and Mrs. George W. Tilley of Worchester, Mass., spent the Fourth in Newport, guests of Mrs. George A. Weaver.

—Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney have arrived for the season at the Henry White cottage, "Edgerton," on Harrison avenue.

—Commander C. H. Harlow of the War College went to Washington Saturday night, to take his examination for promotion.

—Mrs. Stanley C. Hughes and her three sons spent the Fourth of July at Miss Anna F. Hunter's camp at Holderness, N. H.

—Miss Alice Higbee and Mr. Wyman Higbee are spending the summer with their parents, Tax Collector and Mrs. Edward W. Higbee.

—Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills will return from Europe July 15 and will come to Newport to occupy their residence on the Cliffs.

—Mr. Edgerton L. Winthrop is on his way across the Atlantic and will arrive Saturday, coming to his Newport residence immediately.

—Mrs. Ogden Goelet arrived in New York Saturday on the Amerika from Europe. She is expected in a few days at her cottage "Ochre Court," on the Cliffs.

—Fishing steamer Hattie, Captain Ben Maxfield, brought in a ribbon fish Monday which was sent to ex-Mayor Fearing's collection. This is a rare species about here.

—Mr. and Mrs. Nattie Sellar are guests of Mrs. Harold Brown, Mrs. Sellar having recovered from her recent illness, typhoid fever, sufficiently to come to Newport. She will remain here several weeks.

—Mrs. Hamilton McK. Twombly and Miss Ruth Vanderbilt Twombly are at Bar Harbor, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest G. Fabbri, and after a visit there of a week will come to Newport for the summer.

—Sunday a number of warrant officers of the navy and their friends had a picnic at Bradford and during the day sent an invitation to the members of the Newport Yacht Club who were at Dyer's Island to come over and join them, which was done.

—Mr. and Mrs. John R. Drexel, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Symes Lehr, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Dolan, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Craig Biddle and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Dilworth attended the Fell-Randolph wedding at Narragansett Pier Monday.

—The Government Landing fumed was doing its capers on the Fourth, for strangers were unacquainted with its antics and to see them chasing their hats was no unusual sight. Some were in conveyances and some were on foot, while some in pursuing their property slipped and sat down on the pavement.

—Early Sunday evening one of the Fall River cars split the switch in front of the Industrial School and one truck skidded on the pavement. It took 10 or 15 minutes to put the car back on the rails, and as it was at an hour when travel was heavy eight or 10 cars were bunched up and thrown off time.

—Mrs. Ezra F. Barker entertained on the Fourth Mr. and Mrs. William Barker of New Bedford and Mrs. Clara E. Dennis of Portsmouth. Miss Alice Barker had as guest Monday Miss Mildred Barker of Portsmouth. Mr. George Ware of New York was guest on the Fourth of Mrs. Alvin A. Barker and family.

—There was another musical treat at the Hospital Sunday. Mr. Thomas Henderson, the new tenor at St. George's Church, who has sung in prominent churches in Boston and elsewhere, gave two fine solos, "Teach me, O Lord," by Bischoff, and "I heard the voice of Jesus say," by F. G. Rathbun. Mr. Ledley C. Grinnell was the accompanist. "America" was sung by all present, in closing.

—At the Walter Lowrie Club service at the City Asylum Sunday afternoon there was a good attendance of members and friends of the club. Mrs. Ralph Polk, one of the members at Fort Adams, was the speaker and Messrs. E. O. Glazier and H. B. Wood had parts in the service. Mrs. John W. Hammett, Jr., being the pianist. After the service the club people went to assist in the singing at the Hospital.

—Saturday double-truck cars were run on the Broadway-beach route, the travel being heavy and there being a sufficient supply of these cars at the barn, so long as double-headers were not runt out over the Island. Eventually the local single-truck cars will probably give way to the larger ones. New cars of the larger order are being received up the line and the old big ones are being worked down this way.

TAKE THREE OUT OF FOUR.

Newports Lose Saturday, But Win Sunday and Monday.

Break Even with the Giants, and Capture Both Games from East Boston.

Newport took three of the four base ball games played since Saturday noon. The opening number of this quartet was a sort of advance up on the Johnson-Jeffries fight, for Pop Watkins's colored warriors walked away with it in a romp and at the end gave Newport two runs so that the score would not look so bad. They had the skill which confidence and a lead gives a "giant" team and the way they hit and fielded was worth the price. Pop was as full of ginger as he was way back in ante-bellum days, or whenever he began to play the game, and the rest of the team was also. Kelly was on the coaching line with his original poetry and funny gags.

The score shows how things went. The visitors could hit Butler and the locals could not hit McDonald. There was for the white race just one bright spot—where Butler dropped the ball in the third for a home run, which relieved the strain. Newport made some runs afterward, but none were received with the same interest as that homer. The score:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Ormonds	2	2	0	0	4	0	0	0	0—8
Newport	0	0	1	1	0	0	0	0	2—4

Hits—Ormond 13; Newport 6. Two-base hit—Meehan. Home run—Buttler. Stolen bases—Carilla; Kupfer. Struck out—By McDonald 4; by Butler. Bases on balls—By McDonald 7; by Butler 2. Hit batter—McDonald 2; Butler 2. Wild pitches—McDonald 2; Butler 2. Double plays—Southwell-Moore; Southwell-Meehan-Moore. Left on bases—Ormonds 10; Newport 12. Time—2 hours 2 minutes. Umpire Nelson.

Sunday things were different. The Giants were pigmies. It looked as though they had lain down to give Newport a chance and could not come back. Try as they would, they could neither score nor prevent Newport from scoring. Scotty was wild and ineffective, and when McDonald was substituted in the fourth he was ineffective and was taken out and fired from the field by Pop in the sixth. The visitors fell to wrangling among themselves and it was a case of tragedy rather than comedy. Meehan contributed a home run. The score:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9

Hits—Newport 20; Ormond 7. Two-base hits—Shippee, Cambria; McDonald. Three-base hit—White. Home run—Meehan. Stolen bases—Newport 12; Ormond 2. Sacrifice hits—Carilla; Shippee. Struck out—By Burns 4, by Morrison 1; by McDonald 3. Bases on balls—By Burns 1; by Scott 6, by McDonald 2, by Butler 1. Hit batter—By McDonald 2, by Butler 1. Left on bases—Newport 8; Ormond 9. Time—1 hour, 50 minutes. Umpire—Nelson.

Monday morning Butler was in the box for Newport and was effective, though hit hard. One run tally was rung up by East Boston and that was for Moore, of the Training Station. He caught for the visitors and lost a ball over left field fence. With the exception of the seventh and eighth innings the score was close, 2-1 in favor of the home team, but those other two innings were certainly one-sided. The score:

Umpire—Nelson.

In the afternoon of the Fourth Burns pitched his second game for Newport and annexed another victory, and for the fourth successive game there was a home run. Larkin, who caught for Newport in the old Atlantic League days, did the trick. Burns was effective when he desired, and while the visitors made many hits they were held from scoring except when the home team did not seem to care. There was some good fielding on both sides. The umpire came back into favor in this game, because the pitching was right to the point and his troubles were fewer. Newport had three batting rallies, when they caught big Musill's risers and scored both base hits and runs. The score:

Newport	a.b.	r.	1b.	p.o.	a.	e.

Saturday at the Civic League ground the Trojans defeated the Torpedo Station Civilians, 10 to 9. Monday, also at the Civic League grounds, the Trojans defeated Fort Adams, 8 to 2.

At the Cloyne School grounds Monday noon the up-town team defeated the down-town team 8 to 2, in part of the Fourth of July celebration. J. Sullivan and Blackwell were the battery for the winners and D. Sullivan and Carr for the losers. The game was played on the Cloyne School grounds, which were leased for the occasion, the Civic League having refused to allow the committee to use the grounds on Broadway.

The Standish team of colored players, from Worcester, came here Monday to play the Mohawks, also colored, but the Civic League grounds were loaned to the colored as well as to the city players, and they were obliged to look for other grounds.

Burns has re-joined the Newports, and every one was glad to see him. Other new players, Shippee and Kupfer, appeared and showed that men could be secured.

Monday afternoon the field, especially the diamond, was verk dusty and it looked as though the game would be played in a sort of whirlwind of dust until the arrival of a watering cart. It laid the dust and made the game agreeable to the spectators and players.

SPECIFIC TOPICS DISCUSSED.

National Educational Association Takes Up Phases of Child Study.

BOSTON, July 5.—The National Educational Association convention here today broke up into 18 separate and distinct meetings, each assigned to the consideration of specific topics. The phases of child study were developed by the departments of kind-garten and elementary schools departments in joint session.

"We have learned that all of the so-called naughtiness of children may be merely danger signals indicating disturbances somewhere," said Maximilian P. E. Grossemann of Plainfield, N. J., discussing danger signals in young children, in the child study session. Laziness may be anemia and neurasthenia. Children's lies are a separate chapter altogether. Parents as a rule are sadly deficient in training children. No man or woman should be considered fit to marry who cannot give evidence of a training in parental functions." He referred to measurements of height and weight; to Professor Ratch's x-ray pictures of the bones of the wrist to find actual age by bone development, to measuring mental development, the measuring scale of intelligence used in Italy and France and urged family history to complete desirable data.

"The time may come when there will be a science of parenthood," he said. "Teachers should consider themselves students of child nature, not child tamers." That it is time gifted children be given as much care as the defective and inefficient, was the statement of Superintendent Robert J. Aley of Annapolis. "The forward movements of civilization are never led by average men," he said, "they are always under the leadership of individuals who, because of superior ability, have stepped out and beyond the crowd. Too many leaders of the past have been forced to train themselves in the school of experience. The ordinary school has failed to meet the needs of such students. It is worth more to train the genius to the realization of his possibilities than to bring a deficient child to the height of his capability," he said.

"Our faculties have been stupid and wasteful in dealing with athletes, trying to regulate it from one thought," said Professor G. Stanley Hall of Clark University, Worcester, Mass., addressing the meeting of the department of physical education. "They have made no serious attempt to use this tremendous intest for the highest culture. They could do so by courses on the best things the history of physical training has to give. They should teach the vast body now knowledge concerning all matters of hygiene and training. This data would be a veritable Bible of the body for athletes, would instil honor, temperance, the simple life, the spirit of loyalty to even greater wholes than the alma mater and would make training a fine art based on science." The trainer kills honor by teaching to win at any price."

"The ability to raise money, whether from wealthy men or through state legislatures is a sine qua non for the American university president," said Professor James H. Baker of the University of Colorado, Boulder, Col., addressing the meeting of the department of higher education. In administrative problems outside of teachings. The universities are too much governed by the spirit of the times and are compelled to measure everything too much by quantity rather than quality."

TO CURE ANY DISEASE.

The Cause Must be Removed, Same Way With Dandruff.

Kill the germ that causes dandruff, falling hair and baldness, you will have no more dandruff, and your hair must grow luxuriantly. Newbro's Herpicide not only contains the dandruff germ destroyer, but it is also a most delightful hair dressing for regular toilet use. No other hair preparation is on this scientific basis of destroying the dandruff germs. It stops all irritation, keeps the scalp sweet, pure and wholesome. Governor Pothier and Others Escape Danger In Runaway.

Premature Explosion of Providence Fireworks—De Wolf Homestead Anniversary.

Governor and Mrs. Pothier, Colonel Samuel P. Colt of Bristol and Colonel Edmund H. Guerin of Woonsocket narrowly escaped serious injury at Bristol Monday when the four horses attached to the historic De Wolf coach, in which the governor's party was riding, took fright and ran away. Only the fact that the pole of the coach broke when the animals started on their gallop saved the executive and his party from exposure to bodily injury. At it was, the four horses galloped more than a mile before one of them fell and the dash stopped. The accident came about when a milk team backed into the coach. The horses, already excited because of the racket, bolted, snapping the pole of the coach and dragging the driver from the seat. Fenner, who was hurled violently to the ground, kept tight hold of the reins and was dragged some distance before he relaxed his hold. He was knocked unconscious and two ribs on the right side were fractured. Although he struck the ground headforemost his skull was apparently not injured. He revived under the care of a physician and was able later to return to his home here. The historic coach which figured in the crash was that which was used by James DeWolf, United States Senator from Rhode Island from 1821 to 1825, in his journeys between Bristol and Washington. Since then it has been preserved by his descendats, of whom Colonel Colt is one. The crash was the only mar to the celebration of Independence day in Bristol, in which the sailors of cruiser Tacoma participated.

The premature explosion of a section of the arranged fireworks at Roger Williams Park, Providence, Monday evening, made a display which was not on the program in that form and threatened several of the operators with serious injury. The explosion came at about the middle of the scheduled succession of various pieces of pyrotechnics, and was caused, so far as the police can ascertain, from the dropping into the section of sparks from a skyrocket. Instantly there was a series of heavy detonations, and the irregular cannonading was accompanied by streams of colored fire shooting out in all directions, crossing each other at various angles, and seemingly running along the ground for several feet to wind up in mighty bursts of smoke and fire which pitched hissing into the waters of the lake. It was reported by the police after the display that several of the operators had had narrow escapes from serious injury in the premature discharge and this unexpected explosion caused the shortening of the exhibition to a period within the hour.

In celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the erection of the De Wolf homestead, Colonel Samuel Pomeroy Colt Monday, at "Linden Place," his residence in Bristol, kept open house, giving luncheon from 12 to 3 o'clock, and a dance for the young people in the evening. Probably never in the history of the fine old mansion, noted for its hospitality, has there been such a notable day, and the decorations and entertainment were among the most beautiful ever known in the state. The mid-day luncheon was attended by many state and city officials, prominent members of the Rhode Island bar and other prominent men and women. In the front north drawing room Colonel Colt was assisted in receiving by his niece, Mrs. Edwin A. Barrows; his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Russell G. Colt; his sister, Mrs. Frank DeWolf and Governor and Mrs. Aram J. Pothier. The dance in the evening, in the same environment, was a great success, the ideal weather adding to the enjoyment. With its brilliant electric display and the electric fountain throwing its colored spray 14 feet in the air, the scene will be recorded as probably the most brilliant social affair in the annals of the historic old town of Bristol.

"Joe" Seymour, in a Curtiss biplane, flew before about 2,500 people at Marragansett Park Saturday evening in the first public aeroplane flight ever executed in Rhode Island. The aviator made a succession of short trips aloft, following the narrow course of the race track all the way. The longest flight was about a quarter of a mile and he reached an altitude of nearly 60 feet on his last attempt, his flyer rising above the roofs of the race track stables directly opposite the grand stand. He was prevented from making a longer and higher continuous flight by inability to secure sufficient power, he explained after the flight. The 30 horsepower engine which propels Seymour's craft worked obstinately and he could not attain sufficient speed to make the sharp turns successfully. Several minor breaks in the delicate rigging of the biplane caused delays and the aviator expressed the belief that the whole craft was thrown out of gear by the accident a week ago, when he nearly wrecked it by striking a hidden post in the long grass while he was drying to alight. Seymour also gave as a reason for not giving his best exhibition the fact that he was obliged to confine his course to the narrow limits of the race track, on account of the danger of alighting on the uneven and stubbly greensward within the trotting oval.

Joseph W. Manning of East Greenwich had a narrow escape Saturday from being taken to Boston on a charge of being Martin J. Walsh, an associate of "Big Bill" Kelliher, who is wanted on a charge of having assisted in looting the National City Bank of Cambridge, Mass., of which George W. Coleman was assistant clerk. Arrested in Pawtucket Friday night at the request of Federal inspectors working under the Department of Justice, and held under bonds of $25,000 as a fugitive from justice, Manning was released Saturday afternoon, after Harry West and William Galvell, sent here by United States District Attorney French of Boston, had said that he was not Walsh, but was indeed Manning. The men who identified Manning declared that it was no wonder the mistake had been made. They said he bore so marked a resemblance to Walsh that he might easily have been his twin brother.

Albert Crawford Howard, former lieutenant governor of Rhode Island, whose death in Atlanta, Ga., is announced in Providence, was a man whose influence was once keenly felt in this state. His death recalls memories of the time when a majority vote was necessary to elect a governor. He used his influence and personality, always a strong one, on behalf of that large body of temperance or Prohibition Republicans who formerly on occasions showed their power here. It was through this band of Republicans that several of the regular candidates of the party were unable to secure a majority vote and received their titles later from the General Assembly. Another incident which recurs with the memory of ex-Lieutenant Governor Howard is the naming of Governor Sprague's successor in the United States Senate. This was in 1875, and the Prohibition partisans made it necessary to take 25 ballots before General Burnside was chosen. This strength of the party was shown even before Mr. Howard became its leader. Mr. Howard went South about ten years ago under the doctor's orders, and for a few years enjoyed good health there. About two years ago he suffered from heart trouble, which constantly grew worse, and finally resulted in his death. His friends and relatives in the North had known for some time that Mr. Howard could live but a little while longer, and the news of his death did not surprise them. Mr. Howard was a younger brother of Governor Henry Howard, and both were sons of Judge Jesse Howard of Cranston.

A subscription of $5,000 from Samuel Pomeroy Colt has been made to the endowment fund of the Rhode Island School of Design. The gift brings the total receipts toward the $50,000 endowment fund to $37,185. In a letter announcing the gift, Mr. Colt said: "I have considered the matter of a subscription to the $50,000 fund for the Rhode Island School of Design, and it gives me great pleasure to subscribe $5,000 toward the same. I enclose herewith subscription blank filled in for that purpose. While I knew the Rhode Island School of Design was doing a good work, I had no idea of its extent until reading the pamphlet which was left with me. I hope to have in the future a little more margin of time than I have had in the past to give to such improving subjects. I am much interested in art and especially where its study can be turned to practical account, as would seem to be the aim of the School of Design."

Mr. and Mrs. George Briggs, Jr., of Providence left that city Sunday on a novel automobile camping trip through New York state, Pennsylvania and then to Chicago. In their six-cylinder car they will take tents, cots and kitchen utensils and will camp for the night or for longer periods at places along the route which strike their fancy. They expect to be gone about three weeks and will take a camera to secure pictures of points of interest. Albany will probably be their first stopping place, although they may camp off on the way to the New York capital. From Albany they will proceed to Buffalo and then to Erie, Pa., where they will continue west and will probably go as far as Chicago.

Acting Postmaster Moses R. Newell of Woonsocket has received official notice of this appointment as postmaster at Woonsocket to succeed the late John W. Cass. The first official act of importance of Postmaster Newell was to appoint Clement Menard assistant postmaster. This appointment is in the nature of promotion along civil service lines. Mr. Menard, like Mr. Newell, has seen many years of service in the Postoffice Department and is well qualified for the position. The appointment, in and out of the office, meets with general approval. Clement Menard was born in Contrecoeur, Province of Quebec, September 11, 1869, and the same year his parents moved to Woonsocket and he has since been a resident there. He was educated in the Woonsocket public schools and October 12, 1892, entered the local office as stamp clerk during the administration of Postmaster C. N. Brown. From that time he has held different positions in the office and for many years has been in charge of the money order division. He has served the government 18 years.

SAMUEL D. M'ENERY.

[New York Tribune.]

Samuel D. McEnery occupied a unique position in the United States Senate. He had been a Democrat all his life, had fought in the Confederate army, gone through reconstruction in Louisiana, served that state, after the reconstruction fabric had been swept away, as governor and supreme court justice and had been elected and re-elected as a Senator by a legislature with a solid Democrat membership. His technical party allegiance was beyond question. Yet no other Democratic Senator has ever given so continuous a support to Republican policies and measures and retained his standing in the Democratic party. Mr. McEnery was a Democrat on local and state issues, but in national politics his sympathies and tendencies were broadly Republican.

The Louisiana Senator had a clear and logical mind. He differed from most of his Southern associates in being willing to give the Republican party credit for the benefits which its policies conferred upon the South and to support those policies openly, instead of opposing them both in and out of Congress, while at the same time trying to make use of them under cover. There have been many Southern statesmen who have "fought, bled and died" for protection to local products and industries, but they have generally preferred to cloak their desire for protection under the pretence of raising larger revenue for the government, and have declined to co-operate with other states and sections seeking similar protection for their products and industries.

Mr. McEnery was not a statesman of that circumscribed and circuitous sort. He believed in protection for Louisiana's industries, and was willing to vote an equivalent protection to industries in all other parts of the country. He was a nationalist, and not a sectionalist. He stood alone on the Democratic side of the Senate in supporting the Dingley tariff bill and the Payne tariff bill. But he risked neither ostracism nor defeat by that exhibition of political consistency. His state was willing to return him to the Senate as long as he lived, to act in that body with the Republican majority, though it was not willing itself to be committed openly to Republicanism. It honored a directness and candor on Mr. McEnery's part which it considered entirely appropriate, though for its own purpose not as yet practicable. It will now be put to the embarrassment of supplying his place with a Democrat as free as he was from the sense of petty obligation to unwise and undesirable Democratic principles.

FIRST WEEKLY HANDICAP GOLF MATCH.

The members of the Newport Golf Club had their first weekly handicap match of the season Saturday, Mr. Gordon Douglass winning the contest, which was over the full course. The scores of the three best players were as follows:

	Gross	Handicap	Net Score
Gordon Douglass	83	3	80
Llewenard Stewart	101	20	81
Clarence W. Dolan	89	4	85

Other players were Miss Anna Sands, Rev. Roderick Terry, Royal Phelps Carroll, George McFadden, Mrs. Royal Phelps Carroll, Conde Nast, Albert H. Olmsted and Stuyvesant LeRoy.

NEW YORK LETTER.

Late Wet Spring Causes the City a Loss of Over $100 000,000.

Aeronautic Matters—Hunt for an Aristocratic Cat—Church Services in All Languages.

[Correspondence of the News.]

NEW YORK, July 2.—That weather in this city is more valuable than anywhere else on earth has just been evidenced by statistics collected here, which show that New York could well afford, from an investment standpoint, to pay for pleasant days at the rate of $50,000 an hour, or $1,200,000 each. Indeed from returns received from hotels, cafes, stores and pleasure resorts, it is estimated that this city has suffered in the last two months a loss of over $100,000,000. Rarely has a more backward and wet spring been known here and as a result that period of the year when business should be briskest has been extremely dull. During the two months from mid-April to the middle of June really pleasant days were so scarce that they could be counted on the fingers of one hand, while of the remainder absolutely rainy days have been practically the regular thing. As a result roof gardens have been patronized only in the smallest way, and summer shows might almost as well have never started. Even Coney Island, where a single day's attendance of more than 300,000 is nothing uncommon at this time of year, has several times closed far ahead of the regular hour because of the weather. The rain too has not only kept local shoppers away from the stores but has been responsible for the absence from the city of thousands of out-of-town visitors, who ordinarily come annually to purchase their summer outfits. Perhaps the hardest hit of all have been the hotels, road houses and cafes in the immediate vicinity, to which in an ordinary season people from the city flock by the thousand every evening.

Altogether an estimate of $100,000,000 loss caused by the late spring and summer during the last two months is regarded as conservative and Father Knickerbocker is rapidly piling up a bill against the weather man, which even the United States Treasury would find it uncomfortable to meet. At any rate as a result of this spring's weather, any weather-maker who can produce pleasant days can find here a job which will not only far exceed in remuneration the job of rain-making in the West, but will actually exceed the income of John D. Rockefeller himself.

As a result of the mix-up which has been going on here of late, in regard to aerial navigation, matters which have to do with flying and its conduct seem to be aptly enough entirely up in the air. Whether one has the right to fly in this, that, or the other type of machine; to compete for prizes, or generally to disport oneself in the medium which heretofore has symbolized all that is free, seem new to be questions on which no one appears to be qualified to speak authoritatively. For many months patent suits involving primarily the Wright brothers have so complicated flying exhibitions equaling physical risks. With the calling of a meeting at the Hotel Astor, however, for the purpose of forming an American federation of aero clubs, prospects seemed to be bright for the organization of a governing body, which by its action, would relieve aviators of the worries affecting their pocket books and leave them free to consider their business of flying. As a matter of fact, however, the situation there is even more complicated than before, since the meeting resulted merely in a factional war. In addition to some matters which have been made public there are many other factors which have not yet been revealed which indicate that so long as present conditions continue aviation contests will be held under all sorts of conflicting conditions which will leave the contestants, especially those from abroad, up in the air in more ways than one.

New York's police force is up against one of the toughest problems in its history as a result of the disappearance of the most aristocratic feline visitor which has ever come to these shores. To be required to find a certain cat in this city even though the animal be of the most aristocratic lineage is a task which even "the finest" think beyond them. The animal, Flossie, by name, recently arrived from England as a first cabin passenger on a trans-Atlantic liner. She embarked at Southampton, to make the ocean voyage for her health. This unique step was taken at the order of England's most famous cat specialist who had been consulted by Flossie's owner when the pet's spirits seemed to be rather low. Extraordinary as sending a cat on a trans-Atlantic voyage may seem, however, it appears to be justified in this case by the fact that Flossie has won over $4,000 in prizes during the past year, so that her financial value is considerable. Flossie, however, has proven ungrateful, for not only did she increase the feline population by three on the voyage over, but immediately on her arrival deserted her offspring to mingle with the thousands of other cats which roam the city. The kittens are being cared for by the stewardess of the ship on which they were born, while the city's police are hunting for their wandering mother. So far, however, although several hundred cats have been rounded up for identification, the feline voyager has not been discovered.

The rapid change in the character of the population of New York has led the authorities of the Episcopal church in this diocese to adopt a significant departure in enlarging the scope of its work. The new plan is one that has been carefully studied for some time and provides for conducting the services of the church in every language spoken by any considerable number of people in the city. It is pointed out that New York has the most polyglot population of any great city of the world, not excepting Cairo, including 400,000 Italians, 700,000 Jews and 30,000 Armenians, to mention only three of the many nationalities, and that the church at present makes no adequate provision for reaching these elements of the population. The work among the foreign-speaking population is intended to be not so distinctively missionary work as to provide means of bringing religious services within the reach of those who do not speak English, and who otherwise would be deprived of the facilities of the church. The church has recently licensed a man to preach in the Yiddish dialect and has in view the appointment of others to conduct services in various other languages.

That paper money, while it undoubtedly is always tainted, is not so dangerous as it has been painted and that persons possessing such bills need not throw them away through fear of contamination, is a relief-bringing fact just brought to light by scientific men here. While paper money as an avenue by which disease can be transmitted has been under suspicion for a number of years, and has been shown under certain conditions to be an actual menace to the public health, the latest investigation reveals the fact that this particular form of the root of all evil is not as bad as it has been painted. The most careful examination of the very dirtiest bills obtainable has shown that on the average they are inhabited by only 142,000 bacteria each. While the number may seem large to the layman it does not nearly approach the record set by old rags and papers, and the ordinary quart of milk may contain many thousand times this number. So in spite of the fact that disease can undoubtedly be transmitted through paper money it will not be necessary to destroy the bills which one may happen to have in his possession.

Frightfully Disfigured

There is hardly a mother who does not know how terribly disfigured a youngster can become by coming in contact with poison ivy or plants of a similar nature.
As first aid to the injured for such complications a solution of Cabot's Sulpho-Napthol
in the proportion of about a teaspoonful to a pail of warm water, should be applied on soft cloths to the swollen poisoned parts. These should be kept moist continually with this solution. The terrible itching inflammation and pain will quickly subside.
This wonderful "Liquid Cleanliness" is a perfect germicide and antiseptic. Invaluable not only for poision from plants but for poison resulting from the sting of insects or the bites of animals or vermin, as well as rash produced by brown tail moths, sun burn, prickly heat and other skin troubles liable to occur during warm weather.
Sold only in yellow packages by druggists and grocers. 10c., 25c., 50c., 75c. and $1.00. Beware of imitations.

Cook in Comfort
You no longer need wear yourself out with the weakening heat of an intensely hot kitchen. You can cook in comfort.
Here is a stove that gives no outside heat. All its heat is concentrated at the burners. An intense blue flame (hotter than either white or red) is thrown upwards but not around. All the heat is utilized in cooking — none in outside heating.
New Perfection
WICK BLUE FLAME
Oil Cook-stove
entirely removes the discomfort of cooking. Apply a match and immediately the stove is ready. Instantly an intense heat is projected upwards against the pot, pan, kettle or boiler, and yet there is no surrounding heat—no smell—no smoke.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

Why? Because The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is scientifically and practically perfect. You cannot use too much wick—it is automatically controlled. You get the maximum heat—no smoke. The burner is simple. One wipe with a cloth cleans it—consequently there is no smell.
The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is wonderful for year-round use, but especially in summer. Its heat operates upward to pan, pot, or kettle, but not beyond or around. It is useless for heating a room.
It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot.
It has long turquoise-blue enamel chimneys. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

A VARIED FOURTH.

men Congressman Sheffield, members of the General Assembly and city officials. There were three bands, the Seventh Artillery heading the troops from the forts, the Naval Training Station band the seamen and the Newport Military the Newport Artillery. There was also a bugle corps at the head of the second division of the apprentice seamen.

There were many people along the line of march, and a little cheering. The soldiers made their usual excellent appearance, and the seamen were not far behind. The parade occupied about an hour, the officials in their carriages leaving the line when the procession turned at Broadway for the countermarch, and driving to the City Hall were ready for the review when the marching bodies came down Broadway.

The troops from the forts were brought to the Government Landing and returned the same way. The apprentice seamen were also disembarked at the landing, coming from the Station in barges towed by launches, but returned by road. The disembarkment of the troops and the sailors was watched by many and was one of the most interesting parts of the parade.

The Athletic Sports.

The sports at Morton Park in the afternoon drew a big crowd of spectators and not a few contestants, in both the children's and the men's competitions. The winners were as follows:

100-yard dash—A. J. Lee, William Murphy.

Running broad jump—John Jennings 17 feet 9 inches; M. Gemalel, 17 feet.

Sack Race—Charles Bowman, Edward Breen.

Half-mile run—William Murphy, M. Gemalel.

Hammer throw—Thomas Sheehan, 86 feet 6 inches; Thomas Fallon, 75 feet 10 inches.

Three-legged race—McGee and Hickey, Sullivan and Ferill, Integlia brothers.

Shot put—William F. Wilkie, 35 feet.

Shoe race—A. Pedorella.

Free-for-all run, up and down the park—Peter Integlia, William Douglass, Isaac Matteson.

The Boat Races.

The boat races in the upper harbor in the late afternoon did not draw the "gallery" which others have done, and at that most of these who were there had little chance to see much of the racing. Steamer City of Taunton was tied at the north dock and effectually shut off most of the course from the view of those on the deck. Not so many cat boats and power boats as usual were out, which was a good thing for the competing crews. The Training Station furnished a launch and officials for starting the races.

The first contest was between four crews of apprentice seamen from the Training Station. Like most naval matters, this was started close to the time set, and was over by 6:25. Boat 13—note the number—was first; No. 16 second, 25 seconds behind; 14 was third, nip and tuck with 16 and just two seconds behind; 15 was 43 seconds behind the winner, which made it close for the whole race and a very close struggle between 16 and 14.

Three crews started in the pair-oared race. This was a close contest to the finish and the police boat was last, the Point coming to its own. Ezra James and Robert Cooper were the winners, seven seconds ahead of Charles and Will James, with the police crew, Buckley and Fogarty, two seconds behind. This race was also started soon after the time set and the entire affair was over at 6:18.

The Balloon Ascension.

The balloon ascension had its usual difficulties, because of one of Newport's strong features as a summer resort—too much wind. A piping breeze which raised clouds of dust on the roadway and made walking along the board walk something of a tax prevailed all the afternoon. Mr. Litchfield was busy on the Gatron grass plot, where the old Allen pavilion used to stand. He dug a hole and prepared his furnace, supporting poles were laid out on the ground, and the balloon itself was stretched on the grass at mid-afternoon, but most people seemed to see that there would be no ascension until the wind went down.

The committee was on hand at 5 o'clock, the hour scheduled, and so were several hundred persons, but no attempt was made to fill the big bag with hot air. A careful watch was made of the wind and along toward 6 o'clock it showed such decided signs of dropping that it was thought it might be possible to begin filling the balloon. The fire was lighted and the crowd grew. The filling was low, for the wind still flattened the sides, and it was not until after 7 o'clock that the breeze had sufficiently moderated to permit real headway. It was off shore still, and arrangements were made for the lifeboat at the beach to go to sea.

It was 7:20 when the big cloth bag was filled and the parachute jumper gave the word to the men and boys holding the balloon to let go. It shot up in the air and was soon over the sea. There was but one parachute attached, because of the lateness of the hour, and as soon as height for a safe landing had been reached the balloon was cut away and Mr. Litchfield dropped into the sea, was picked up by the lifeboat and was soon back on the beach with his big umbrella.

The bag was not weighted very heavily at the top, and so did not capsize and spill out its filling. It soared higher, floated away to the southwest, was to be seen from the city seven or eight minutes, and finally dropped in the sea off Brenton's Point. The wetting of the big bag precluded the second scheduled ascension. The balloon went so high that it could be seen from every part of the city at some time during its flight and there were hundreds of people standing on the streets, craning their necks.

The Fireworks and the Accident.

The fireworks exhibition at the beach was enough to end that sort of thing around Newport. There was a general promiscuity about the direction in which the rockets were shot off, and many being there to see the show there were many misses and several hits. Why there were not more hits is the surprise. The police notified the shooters to correct their aim and so did others, but there was even at the end a lack of knowledge as to where the rockets should be sent which helped to make the exhibit a disappointment to those who wished to see fireworks.

It was known that the display would be shorter than last year, on account of the balloon ascension. It was scheduled to last only until 8:30 and there was a rapid discharge at the start and well along toward the time limit, when apparently it was thought advisable to lengthen the display. In view of the fact that there was to be no second balloon ascension. This idea was put into effect a trifle late and the result was a rather desultory display toward the close. This was not the fault of the fireworks but of the lengthening of the display from half an hour to nearly an hour. Even then, though it would [illegible] anything.

There were some fine rocket displays, but as before stated there was a glorious uncertainty as to where the rockets were going. Some were aimed north and some southwest, some east and some northwest. It was supposed that, there being practically no wind, the rockets would be shot so as to fall over the pond, and this was the way they were started; but one plunged right into the crowd on the beach, another hit a lot where the balloon was supposed to go up, and another hit a house. Some of the rockets lacked power to ascend where they were supposed to go, and these scattered, at times, rocket effects among the crowd. Had these ascended where they were supposed to go they would have been out of the way and afforded a fine spectacle; instead they simply frightened people.

One of these struck the carriage of Mr. R. H. Wheeler, Jr., and some of the combustibles fell on the face of Mr. Wheeler's child, who was burned about the chin. A doctor sent the injured child to a pharmacy, where the proper treatment for burns could be given. A woman had her dress partly burned by some of the display, but that is to be expected.

There was a big crowd on the beach and the adjacent roads to watch the display.

On the Cars and at the Beach.

The transportation companies did a big business, and when the rush was over and the conductors had turned in their money at the old colony barn there was found to be so much of it that a special car was used to transfer it to a point nearer the centre of the city, where the police are closer at hand. The day was not very propitious at its opening and travel did not start very heavy, but as it wore on the crowds came in bunches and both cars and boats were crowded. In the car line about everything was running which could be manned and the crews were fed on the cars and held close to their jobs until late in the evening. It was after 10 o'clock before there was a chance to haul off any of the extras. The automobile traffic was heavy also, and this the ferries especially noted. The travel seemed to be in no one direction, but well into the evening seemed to be going both ways on all regular lines.

Steamer City of Lowell brought 1,600 passengers from New London, arriving shortly after 1 o'clock and leaving at 4:30. The ferries did a large business, carrying many passengers and many automobiles going both ways. The regular Providence boats had good-sized crowds, although the attractions in Providence and Bristol kept many up the river. The trolley lines ran two and three cars on their various trips and carried thousands of passengers during the day.

The Fourth was a big day at the beach, there being great crowds there all day. While many of the excursionists seemed to be roaming about the city, it also seemed as if they must all be there. Bathing was not so general as it would be later in the season, but the sand and the walks were crowded. It was probably the coolest place most of the people had struck, for they spoke appreciatingly of the cool breezes, even if it was a trifle strong, as compared with the torrid heat at home for some time past. The new construction at the beach seemed to cause the crowds to spread out more as the piazzas about the main pavilion are not so commodious or provided with so great seating accommodations.

Notes.

The parade was a big one in the eyes of strangers in town. A man from Boston said that if they could have such a parade in the streets of that city there would not be room on the sidewalks for the people out to witness it. Many Newporters did not take the trouble to leave their homes to view it, as it was only what they had seen many times before.

The army made a particularly strong showing, for Colonel Collin let it be understood that every available man from the companies ordered out was expected to do parade duty. The companies are recruited nearly to full strength and few special duty excuses were considered. As this division came down Washington square it was impressive for its solidity, for marching in column of sections it occupied the entire distance from Thames street to the court house.

The naval brigade was not so strong as it has appeared sometimes, but in "all white" it attracted much attention, especially from strangers unused to seeing sailors in parade.

The Newport Artillery was well spread out, but appeared rather small in numbers, officered as a regiment in comparison with companies of the regulars having but one or two officers.

Unfortunately for Newport's reputation the parade was over before the excursionists began to arrive in great numbers. The day was a holiday and the parade was held as early as possible, that the men of the service might have as large a portion of it as could be for their own enjoyment.

Since the approach to the reviewing point at the City Hall was not policed, carriages and automobiles started to close in on the area where the marchers required the entire street to make their best appearance.

Just after the parade started a tire of the carriage containing Acting Mayor Sheply came off and dropped out of the line to pick up spare parts.

Owing to the fact that the electricians are busy, the Torpedo Station did not have an elaborate display for the night of the Fourth. Commander Bristol's house had the usual electric star and the ferry house a pleasing electric illumination. These served to show off the Station and made a pretty picture from the wharves and harbor.

MAN AND BOAT BURNED.

The Latter Sunk to Extinguish Fire Caused by Explosion of Gasoline Fumes.

Another Greek lobster boat furnished a gasoline explosion story early Sunday morning. It was 3:20, but broad daylight, when Angelos Mazrogranis went on board the Half Century, tied between Long wharf and the Newport Yacht Club house, and lighted a match. There was apparently no danger, and he was not in the cabin; but the gasoline below the flooring blew up, the boat was set on fire, Angelos was burned and the boat was burned, and so was the sail to a certain extent.

Neighbors and the men of Chemical 1 responded to the call for help and Jimmy O'Connell was by general consent appointed foreman of the fire fighters. They filled the cockpit with water until the well was below the surface and the boat sank. Not until then was the fire which was chiefly gasoline, extinguished.

Later the boat was lifted and pumped out. John Saras, the owner, estimated the damage at about $50. The heat of Saturday is supposed to have developed the gasoline fumes and caused the explosion. It was not really a first-class explosion, for the boat can be used, though there is a hole in the sail and some repairs will need to be made.

THE NEW ROYAL HOUSEHOLD.

King George V Honors Many of His Father's Courtiers.

Some Who Had Been Noticeably Prominent Fail to Receive a Manifestation of Favor.

[Marquis de Fontenoy.]

It is doubtful whether any issue of the London "Official Gazette" during the last few years has excited more universal interest than that which appeared the other day containing the list of the appointments of the household of the new king. So much had been gossipped and printed regarding the alleged intention of George V to have nothing whatever to do with his father's entourage, and to cut himself completely adrift therefrom, that the most sweeping changes were looked for, and it was generally assumed that "The Gazette" would furnish the indication of a wholly new departure at court and a clew to the character of the reign that has just opened.

No little surprise was therefore manifested when on perusing "The Gazette" in question it was found that most of the members of the household of Edward VII, had been retained in some way or other by his successor. Lord Knollys was reappointed principal private secretary, in conjunction with Sir Arthur Bigge, and Colonel Sir Frederick Ponsonby is to fill the same offices of assistant private secretary and of equerry which he held in the late reign. Another equerry to be continued in office is Colonel Sir Henry Legge. Colonel Sir Arthur Davidson, who was equerry to King Edward, has become master of the household to Queen Alexandra, and another of the late king's equerries, Captain Sir Seymour Fortescue, of the royal navy, becomes a groom of the bedchamber; that is to say, a gentleman-in-waiting to George V. Colonel Sir Charles Frederick remains master of the royal household and the Hon. John Fortescue librarian, while the Hon. Henry Stoner, Captain Sir Walter Campbell, the Hon. Sidney Greville and Captain Charles Cunningham Graham are all continued as grooms of the bedchamber, Sir Donald Mackenzie Wallace, formerly of "The London Times," and Admiral Sir John Fullerton remaining on as extra grooms.

Most of the other gentlemen of King Edward VII have been appointed extra equerries, including Lord Marcus Beresford, Colonel Sir George Holford, the Hon. John Ward, Colonel Henry Streatfield, Colonel Count Gleichen and Colonel the Hon. A. Falke Greville. The meaning of the appointment to the post of extra equerry is this: That its holder retains his connection with the royal household, with all the privileges and prerogatives of the office, the uniform and the aiguillettes of the ordinary equerry and the entree at court for himself and his wife, but without drawing the pay of an equerry, which amounts to $3,000 a year, and without being called on to perform any duty save in the event of emergency, such as, for instance, a coronation, a state funeral, etc. To most of the men who have received from King George the appointment of extra equerry the question of pay is a matter of profound indifference. But it is a great privilege in their eyes to be allowed to retain the office of equerry, with all its prerogatives and social prestige and none of its work. For the duties of what is known as an equerry in ordinary, that is to say, in actual waiting, are very exacting, requiring during one's term of service constant attendance on the monarch, unfailing good humor, the subordination of all one's own sentiments, views and prejudices to those of the royal master, and with all that the knowledge of his royal charge, is primarily responsible to the reigning house, to the government and to the nation for his protection from all harm.

Edward VII had such an abundance of vitality, was so constantly on the go that in spite of all his consideration for those around him he used to wear his equerries out, and in his later years the older members of his household were no longer able to stand the pace and were forced to give way to younger men.

What attracted, however, still more attention in the list of household appointments than the names included therein were the names omitted therefrom. George V had re-appointed so very many of his father's retainers as members of the household, either in an active or in an honorary capacity, that those who failed to receive this manifestation of royal favor and regard naturally became the object of remark. Among them are Sir John Lister-Kaye, who was a groom of the bedchamber to the late king, and whose wife is an American woman, a sister of the late Duchess of Manchester and of Fernando Yznaga, of New York. Nor have Sir Archibald Edmondstone and Montague Eliot, who married last week Miss Nellie Post, daughter of Lady Barrymore, by her former marriage with the late Arthur Post, of New York, been continued as grooms of the bedchamber, or in any other capacity, their connection with the royal household being severed, as has also that of Colonel Cuthbert Larking, who has piloted so many American people into London society and court circles.

Nor can I find the name of Aleck Yorke among the members of the new king's household, in any capacity, and with him there vanishes from court its most brilliant amateur actor and inimitable mimic, who used to make the late Queen Victoria laugh till the tears came by his mimicry of the various people of the royal household and of the statesmen and other dignitaries who visited Windsor and Osborne. For Queen Victoria, in spite of the air of austerity which characterizes most of her portraits, had a keen sense of humor and of ridicule, and it is said never enjoyed herself quite so much as when, on one occasion, at the mischievous suggestion of her daughter, Princess Henry of Battenberg, and in obedience to her own commands, Aleck Yorke, in fear and trembling, actually took off the august old lady herself—that is to say, mimicked her to her very face.

Aleck Yorke is now the sexagenarian son of the fourth Earl of Hardwicke, and was equerry to the late Duke of Albany. It was owing to his services to the duke that Queen Victoria, after the latter's death, appointed Yorke to be one of her grooms-in-waiting, that is to say, a gentleman-in-waiting, an office in which he was continued by Edward VII when he came to the throne.

A NEW REMEDY.

Ex-Governor Folk of Missouri, at the Missouri Society's dinner in the Waldorf-Astoria, said of corruption.

"The existence of corruption is the fault of the people. The populace, instead of making a real effort and ridding itself of corruption once for all, wriggles uneasily and does nothing. In fact, the populace adopts the dangerous laisser-faire policy of the boy with the stomach ache.

"'You mustn't go swimming today,' this boy's father said. 'You've got stomach ache, you know.'

"'Oh, that'll be all right, father,' said the boy. 'I'll swim on my back.'"

A RAILROAD BEAUTIFIED.

Banks Decorated With Foliage and Blossoms Along the "Rose Route to New York."

[Civic League Bulletin.]

June is the month of roses. Hence what season so appropriate for describing a recent experiment in making a very practical use of these beautiful flowers!

For some time past the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad has been making extended improvements to the Shore Line road between Providence and New London, with a view to the elimination of the dust nuisance. Rock ballast and roses are the means employed. The old dirty sand and cinder surface of the roadbed is being replaced by one of trap rock, which not only provides a solid and smooth bed for the rails and preserves the ties, but is, besides, practically dustless, so that there is no fine dirt to be sucked up from the track and scattered abroad by each passing train. The problem of banishing the dust sucked in by the trains from the sandy embankments through which the road winds is a more difficult one. Some kind of vegetation must be found to cover the soil and act as a blanket for the dust, but at the same time it must be non-inflammable and not liable to take fire easily from sparks of passing locomotives in the dry season.

Rambler rosebushes were recommended by landscape experts as especially suited to this purpose and late last fall 1,300 bushes, of the Dorothy Perkins variety, were set out in the deep cut north of Apponaug, R. I. The bushes extend along both sides of the track for a distance of about 400 feet, near the Apponaug station, and further on along the east side of the track for a similar distance. This is said to be one of the most dusty places on the line. The bushes, which are of the climbing variety, are planted in three rows; the lower row is just above the gutter, while the top row is several feet below the crest of the embankment. Under favorable conditions they will send out shoots from 12 to 15 feet long in one season. They will be trained to run up the sandy bank and will be intertwined with the row above thus forming a solid, tangled mat of foliage and branches, which will effectively keep down the dirt and fine sand. If the rose treatment of the banks in this section proves a success, the work will be extended in other places.

Already the newspapers are making joking allusions to the "Rose Route to New York," and are laughing about the affection and esteem shown by the railroad system for Rhode Island in decorating it with festoons of roses. But if the rose planting accomplishes what is claimed, the travelers by the Shore Line will be practically rid of the dust nuisance and will also enjoy the increased beauty of the landscape when glaring banks of sand are covered with green foliage and pink blossoms; while the corporation itself will save a large sum of money each year, since the shifting sand has been directly the cause of considerable expenditure for maintaining tracks.

NEW TELEPHONE DIRECTORY.

Much Annoyance and Delay in Service Caused by Giving the Wrong Number.

The new telephone directory for the summer of 1910 is being distributed and the company is making special efforts to call the attetion of subscribers to the strict use of this directory and the total elimination of previous lists or memory. Great care is used in preparing the directory and the calling of wrong numbers is responsible for a great deal of annoyance to subscribers and a general cutting down of the efficiency of the service. The record taken on a recent day shows that 350 calls by name were referred to "information" for the number, while each was correctly listed in the directory. This meant a material delay in the service that day, because the office force must look up the numbers. At least 100 calls are received each day where the wrong number is given, either because of reliance on memory or reference to a private list. This means the annoyance of subscribers who are not desired and a delay in securing the desired connection. The rush season is now on, when the operators are handling thousands of calls a day—one might say an hour, at certain periods of the day. They work mechanically in the handling of numbers, but names they are not expected to know, and if one is careful in giving the number desired he will find usually that the operators will serve him with speed and precision.

"HAUL OUT WEEK."

Eastern Yacht Club Craft Prepare for the Annual Cruise.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., July 5.—This is "haul out" week for the yachts of the Eastern Yacht Club that expect to participate in the club's annual cruise along the picturesque shores of Maine. More than a score of the fastest and largest boats in the club's fleet will follow Commodore Clark's flag out of the harbor next Saturday morning on the initial run of 55 miles to Portland lightship, and with several new harbors to explore it is expected the fleet will remain intact until the disbandment gun off the reading room at Bar Harbor July 15. The auxiliary schooner class and the small sloop class are expected to furnish most of the sport this year.

The club's annual regatta will be held Thursday, with the yearly struggle for possession of the Puritan cup, a perpetual trophy named in honor of the old cup defender, now ending her days as a brave packet out of New Bedford.

MARRIED IN LONDON.

Prince Radziwill Weds Miss Deacon at St. Mary's Cadogan Square.

LONDON, July 5.—Miss Dorothy Deacon, daughter of the late Edward Parker Deacon, and Prince Antoine Albert Radziwill were married in St. Mary's church, Cadogan Square today. The ceremony was quiet, without bridesmaids and only a few relatives and near friends attended. Lord Grey De Ruthlen gave the bride away. Prince Radziwill marries against the determined opposition of his mother, who is supposed to be in Austria to attend the wedding of a younger son. This London ceremony was postponed a few days ago because necessary documents demanded by English law had not arrived, and it was then reported in society that objections of the prince's mother had prevented.

Prince Radziwill is 26 years old and will succeed his father Prince George as head of the great Polish family of Radziwill. His father is confined in an insane asylum. The bride's father died in an asylum in America some years ago after a scandal in France, which resulted in his divorce. A sister, Miss Gladys Deacon, is noted for her beauty and has at different times been reported to be engaged to members of noble European families.

NORTH DAKOTA'S COMMANDER.

Captain Albert Gleaves Selected as Mulligan's Successor.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Captain Albert Gleaves, aide to Assistant Secretary of the Navy Winthrop, has been selected to take command of the big battleship North Dakota. He will succeed Captain R. T. Mulligan, whose resignation from the navy was accepted last week. The North Dakota is now at the Boston navy yard.

DIES WHILE PLOUGHING FIELD.

Former Congressman Atwater Passes Away at Home in Durham.

DURHAM, N. C., July 5.—While ploughing on his farm 20 miles from Durham late yesterday, former Congressman John M. Atwater dropped dead in the field. He was elected to the fifty-fourth Congress as a populist. He was 70 years old.

JAMESTOWN.

[Regular correspondence of the News.]

Mr. D. B. Fearing, of Newport, crossed the island today to Narragansett.

Mrs. Raymond Waldron, of Providence, is guest of Mrs. John Brooks on Clinton avenue.

Mrs. Ralph Fuller of Providence, is visiting her parents, Captain and Mrs. C. L. Champlin, on Union street.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Clarke of Newark, N. J., spent the Fourth with Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Clarke on Narragansett avenue.

Mrs. Rudolph Norrell Booraem and her three young daughters are settled for the season in the Spencer cottage. Mrs. Booraem was Miss Mary Cox Hewson, of Philadelphia, a niece of Mrs. Frank Wetherill. Mr. Booraem, the younger son of the old Knickerbocker family, is temporarily living in Fort Collins, Col., manager of extensive sugar interests; he will join his family in August.

Commander L. L. Reamey, U. S. N., and Mrs. Reamey are at the Bay View Hotel for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Percival Gibson entertained a party of 50 of their friends at a clambake on the grounds of the south pumping station, among the guests being Rev. and Mrs. G. Holt of Oklahoma. The afternoon was spent in automobiling and playing various games. In the evening there was a fine display of fireworks. The bake under the supervision of Mr. Frederic Anthony was a success.

MOTOR BOAT PARTY MISSING.

Mr. and Mrs. William Helme of Pawtucket, who left here Monday afternoon in their motor boat, after spending the Fourth with friends, did not reach their destination and at last accounts have not been heard from. Mrs. Helme is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bickerton, formerly of this city and now of Pawtucket, and Mr. Bickerton, who was here Monday, returned today to learn, if possible, something of the missing boat.

WASHINGTON'S POPULATION.

Substantial Gain in Percentage Due to Attractiveness as Place of Residence.

[New York Tribune.]

Washington is the first city whose population in 1910 has been announced by the Census Bureau. The growth in the last decade has been 62,351—at the rate of 13.8 per cent. The percentage of increase from 1890 to 1900 was 21; so that there has been a slight retardation in the capital's development. Yet most Washingtonians will doubtless be satisfied with the moderate increase recorded, since they are sensibly content to see the city grow slowly through accretions due to an appreciation of its attractiveness as a place of residence rather than to its exploitation as a centre of industry and commerce.

For a city which has little manufacturing outside that which the government is obliged to do for itself, and practically no wholesale trade, Washington's gain seems substantial enough. It must depend for its expansion on the growth of the activities of the federal establishment. That is slow but sure. Every addition to the civil service or to the naval and military services is an additional guarantee of the city's future. Thousands who have served the government in some capacity remain in Washington when that service is over. It is an ideal place in which to live in retirement, or in which to educate a family.

But its gains of population on these scores are offset by losses due to the drift of the more active adults to centres where there are greater opportunities in industry and business. Were Washington able to hold its natural increase in population, giving it employment such as is easily to be found in commercial communities, it would soon outstrip all its neighbors. Baltimore has been growing at a slower rate than Washington and is not likely to show in this census a higher percentage than Washington's. Yet Baltimore is a seaport, jobbing and railroad centre and a seat of manufacture.

The national capital can scarcely hope to attain more than moderate size, because its area is limited and will soon be fully occupied. The government has taken a liberal amount of the available space for public buildings, grounds and parks, and there is no section left undeveloped which is suitable for manufacturing purposes. It would be better policy, therefore, to encourage slower growth along the lines which have been followed heretofore than to try to stimulate industry and thus introduce an element out of place in the quiet, orderly easy-going life of the community. Other cities are fitted to be marts of trade and smoke-covered hives of industry. Washington has the better part in remaining a centre of leisure, cultivation, decorum and beauty.

JUNE, COLD AND WET.

Official Records Show Only Six Clear Days in the Month and Much Precipitation.

June's official records show that it was both cooler and wetter than the average June since the Weather Bureau was established in Providence. The temperature average was three degrees lower, while there was .84 of an inch more precipitation. There was more rain last month than in any June since 1905, when 5.63 inches fell, as compared with 3.08 inches this year.

The June mean barometer was 29.93, with the highest 30.24 inches, on the twenty-sixth, and the lowest 29.48, on the first.

The highest temperature was 91, on the twenty-first, and the lowest 44 on the fifth, both very nearly new records. There was a range of 26 degrees on the thirtieth and of two degrees on the eleventh. The temperature average was 65.2 degrees, while the normal June record is 68. The average daily deficiency in temperature was 3.1 degrees. Since January 1 there has been an accumulated excess of temperature of 273 degrees, or an average daily excess of 1.5 degrees.

The total June precipitation was 3.98 inches with the greatest precipitation in 24 hours 1.07 inches, on the eighteenth. Since January 1 there has been an accumulated deficiency of 5.23 inches. June was the first month which did not add to the deficiency.

The prevailing direction of the wind was northwest, with a total movement of 6,616 miles, an average hourly of 9.2 miles. The maximum velocity was 33 miles, from the southeast, on the sixth.

There were six clear, 18 partly cloudy and eight cloudy days, and on 12 days .01 of an inch of precipitation or more occurred. The miscellaneous phenomena noted include hail on the eighteenth, a lunar halo on the fifteenth fog on the sixth seventh, tenth, eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth. Thunderstorms occurred on the seventh and eighteenth.

NEW YORK, July 5, Wall Street—The market opened with Amalgamated Copper at 66¾, American Beet Sugar 30, American Smelting and Refining 69¾, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe 97, Baltimore & Ohio 107¾, Brooklyn Rapid Transit 74½, Chesapeake & Ohio 74¾, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul 118½, Colorado Fuel & Iron 21, Erie 25, Great Northern preferred 125, Great Northern Ore Certificates 63½, Interborough Metropolitan 18, Missouri Pacific 59, Missouri, Kansas & Texas 35½, New York Central 114, Northern Pacific 119, Pennsylvania 129¾, Reading 145½, Rock Island 32, Southern Pacific 112¾, Southern Railway 23, Union Pacific 169, United States Steel 71¾, United States Steel preferred 111½, Wabash preferred 37.

10—A very unsettled tone characterized the opening stock market. The advance during the three days' holiday in London affected only a part of the list, the metal industrials and some of the leading railroads showing weakness. Chesapeake & Ohio was lifted 1½ and Baltimore & Ohio and New York Central a point. The United States Steel stocks and Pennsylvania declined 1, and Union Pacific and American Smelting ¾. Reading, after opening up ⅝, ran off 1½ below last Friday.

11—There were a few fitful rallies, but the whole market soon sank back to a low level. Some of the largest declines in the first hour's trading were Reading 4, Union Pacific 3½, Northern Pacific 3¼, United States Steel 3¼, St. Paul 2¾, Atchison 2½, and Rock Island 2 points from occasional covering by shorts and the rapid decline left only a small margin from the low prices of last week. The bank statement of Saturday was taken to indicate probable calls for further stock market liquidation. Chief Justice Fuller's death seemed to point to further delay in settling the Sherman law cases.

Noon—Stocks had no support except Strike talk by Pennsylvania Railroad employes and the strength of wheat were factors. Union Pacific declined 4¼, National Biscuit 4, Louisville & Nashville 3, and the list generally 1 to 2 points. A slight rally threw the market into dullness. Bonds were irregular. Money on call firm, at 2¾ per cent. Prime mercantile paper 4¾ to 5 per cent.

FOR PRACTICAL INSTRUCTION.

Course in Electricity May be Introduced by Educational Committee of the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. W. B. Clayton of a firm of electrical and mechanical engineers of Boston, and author of electrical text-books, was here recently to confer with General Secretary Chaplin with reference to the introduction of a practical course in electricity, such as has been conducted by Mr. Clayton in several Associations in New England during the past year. If after investigation the educational committee of the Young Men's Christian Association deems that this particular course will meet a demand in Newport, arrangements will doubtless be made for its introduction next fall.

The Association has for some time been planning to develop a number of lines of practical instruction to young men and boys who are working by day and wish to study one or more nights a week. It now has good facilities for such work, as it was contemplated in the construction of the new building. It is simply a question of ascertaining the most needed subjects and the committee is going slowly, that no mistakes may be made at the start.

The state committee has just added to its force a well equipped man to specialize in advising Associations with reference to their educational work. Mr. W. C. Smith, a director of the Wynona Technical Institution now known as the National Trades School, begins his work as the state secretary for educational work July 1, and will assist the Newport Association in plotting out its educational and industrial plans.

In this connection it is interesting to note the remarkable success of the educational departments of the Associations throughout the country. Last winter 19,148 students were enrolled in the various Associations, 21,000 educational clubs were conducted, 12 trade schools were maintained, 5,400 practical talks were given and 2,184 teachers employed. The students paid toward the maintenance of these features $37,500 in tuition fees. Many classes for boys were conducted free of charge. This can readily be done where endowments and special gifts provide the mere cost of teaching an equipment.

Because the Young Men's Christian Association has the facilities and the trained leadership, and its educational department is absolutely non-sectarian it is probably the best prepared organization to enter this field of service to young men and boys. The Newport Association desires to fall into line with other Associations of the country in this form of service as rapidly as its resources will allow.

BUSY DAY FOR THE POLICE.

Main Trouble Was Disturbance Between Colored Men and Whites After the Fight.

The police had a busy day, for they had many places to care for and events to look after, and were in luck in having very little trouble to handle. There were some arrests before the real opening of the Fourth, but the prisoners were allowed to go that they might take part in the real celebration. There was a little trouble at Frasch's, where a customer, after eating ice cream, went to sleep and when Hermann Frasch woke him he felt rather resentful about being roused and hit him. There was no desire to prosecute him. Two drunks were taken in at night and both were fined this morning; one paid, the other did not.

The Johnson-Jeffries fight made less trouble than had been expected. It was thought, judging by former events, that there would be a breaking out of sports celebrating the event, but apparently this was nipped in the bud.

One colored man on Thames street shouted "Hurrah for Johnson," and was promptly "slugged." Some friends took him out of trouble; then he saw a man across the street, thought it was the one who slugged him, went over and hit him. Officer Gentile was right there and took the Johnson man in. It was a lucky thing for him, for a crowd gathered and wished to make a mat out of him. Up in Kerry Hill the barrooms were cleared of colored men, a temperance move which kept the district quiet after the first disturbance was over. The patrol went up with officers and there was an effort to prevent any trouble, but apparently this had been done by forcing the colored sports into a state of dryness, due to the inability to procure liquor.

Along about 2 a. m. the celebration of the Fourth was not yet over for all. James Gormes Rogers, colored, passed a number of whites on West Broadway and there was some talk. Apparently James was outnumbered, for he was later arrested, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon—to wit, a knife—on Joseph Tierney. The latter had seven stitches taken in his arm at a doctor's office, where he went after the cutting affray. He also had three cuts in his coat. Rogers pleaded not guilty at the police station this morning and his case was continued to Friday.

Down at the beach Monday night a man saw two boys with bicycles, and for some reason thought they were stolen. He shouted at the boys, who dropped the bicycles and ran. Along came an automobile and put one of them out of business. The police have the two wheels, waiting for owners.

FUNERAL OF JOHN Y. THURSTON.

The body of the late John Y. Thurston arrived from Medfield, Mass., Sunday morning and a funeral service was held immediately afterward at the Belmont Memorial Chapel by Rev. Mr. Spence of Medfield, who accompanied the party to this city. A number of relatives of the deceased met the party at the depot and formed the funeral procession to the chapel. The interment was in the family lot in the Old cemetery.

It is going far back to say that the deceased was a son of "Father" Thurston (William C.) who had a large family, among whom was the late Mrs. Pardon Stevens. He was in his eighty-third year and left Newport immediately after his marriage in 1867. He resided in Medfield, where he died, and leaves one daughter.

SOCIAL FUNCTIONS.

Colonel Robinson's Cincinnati Dinner Prominent Among Many Entertainments.

Colonel C. L. F. Robinson entertained at dinner at "Heartsease" Sunday evening in honor of Colonel Asa Bird Gardiner, president of the Rhode Island Society of the Cincinnati, and other members of that organization. The table was decorated with red, white and blue flowers and small American flags and the room was hung with portraits of George Washington and other Continental heroes.

The guests included Colonel Gardiner, Mr. George W. Olney, secretary of the Cincinnati; Rt. Rev. Sidney C. Partridge, D. D., Bishop of Kyoto, Japan; Congressman William Paine Sheffield, Mr. T. K. North of England, Mr. Thomas P. Peckham, president of the Rhode Island Society of the Sons of the Revolution; Rear Admiral Raymond P. Rodgers, U. S. N., General William Ennis, U. S. A. (retired); Commander P. W. Hourigan, U. S. N., Commander Mark L. Bristol, U. S. N., Presiding Justice Willard B. Tanner of the Rhode Island superior court, Colonel Frank P. King of the Newport Artillery, General Charles L. Davis, U. S. A., General Huzard Stevens, Colonel Thomas A. Pierce, Rev. Stanley C. Hughes and Messrs. Elisha Dyer, Jr., Henry H. Ward, Edward Wilkinson Rogers, William G. Roelker, Charles Howland Russell and Robert T. Varnum.

The Newport Mandolin and Guitar Club played at the dinner.

Mrs. John Nicholas Brown gave the first dinner dance of the season of 1910 at her residence, "Harbour Court," on Harrison avenue, Saturday evening, this being the first large entertainment by Mrs. Brown in her new house. It was in honor of Miss Susan Dresser, daughter of Mr. Daniel LeRoy Dresser, and among the 26 guests were Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt. Fully 100 participated in the dance which followed.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., Mrs. Marsden J. Perry, Mrs. Edward J. Berwind, Mrs. James P. Kernochan, Mrs. E. H. G. Slater, Mrs. Pedro Bruguiere, Mrs. Clarence W. Dolan, Mrs. Clermont L. Best and Mrs. John R. Drexel also gave dinners Saturday night. The Amphion orchestra furnished music.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt gave a dinner at "Sandy Point Farm" Sunday evening, followed by a dance and minstrel entertainment. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Leonard M. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Charles DeLoosy Oelrichs, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Dolan, Mr. and Mrs. Austen Gray, Mrs. E. S. Reynolds Hitt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cassatt, Mr. and Mrs. Paulding Fosdick, Mr. and Mrs. Craig Biddle, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Norman, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sykes Lehr, Miss Laura Swan, Mrs. Joseph H. Dilworth and Messrs. Francis Roche, Kenneth P. Budd, Dennie M. Hare, Andrew Robson, Frederick W. Paine, Cyril Hatch, George Brooke, Jr., and Barclay Warburton.

Dinners were also given Sunday evening by Mrs. W. Watts Sherman, Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry, Mrs. J. F. D. Lanier, Mrs. Marsden J. Perry and Mrs. John R. Drexel.

Mrs. James R. Kernochan gave a lawn party and reception at "Seaview" Monday afternoon, which was well attended. Music was furnished by Professor Leo Shubb's orchestra and Freebody Park also furnished two attractions—Felix Adler, the well known comedian and singer, and the Demont Trio in an acrobatic comedy, for the entertainment of the guests.

The Clam Bake Club held its annual Fourth of July dinner at the clubhouse on Easton's Point. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt entertained at luncheon on the Warrior and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt gave a luncheon at "Beaulieu."

Monday evening Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs gave a dinner followed by informal dancing, at "Seaclift," in honor of her sister, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., who is guest of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. Dinners were also given by Mrs. Marsden J. Perry, Miss C. Ogden Jones and Mrs. John R. Drexel.

CLOWNS IN THE FOREPAUGH-SELLS SHOW.

Clever clowns are one of the reasons of the success of the Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers Big United Shows. There are 50 of them, picked from the theatres and royal courts of Europe and Asia. Each has his own characteristic method of creating laughter. This season's performance has an unusual number of novelties in the way of farces, pantomimes, skits, travesties and burlesques. There are hilarious antics beneath the big tent from the start to the finish of the show. Individual hits are made by comedians from the theatres of Germany and France, buffoons from famous Drury Lane, jesters from the courts of Asiatic kings, and burlesque artists from our own comic opera stage.

In addition to the fifty clowns there are a number of burlesque trapeze and horizontal bar acts.

PROBATE COURT.

In the probate court this morning letters of administration de bonis non with the will annexed on the estate of George W. Green were granted to Edward L. Spencer. The first and final account of the executor of the estate of George E. Burkinshaw, the administrator's final account with the estate of Catherine Rainey, and the administrator's first and final account with the estate of Julia H. Adams were allowed and ordered recorded. Inventories of the estates of Katharine K. Collins and Jane Blount were ordered recorded.

The petitions for probate of the will of Andrew Murberg, for leave to sell personal property of the estate of John R. Leslie and for consideration of the administrator's first and final account with the estate of Mary Shea were continued for further hearing.

A VARIED FOURTH.

Only One Balloon Ascension and a Fireworks Accident.

All the Other Features, including the Parade, the Sports and the Boat Races.

The Fourth of July celebration in Newport was of a varied and interesting character, and except for an accident during the fireworks exhibition at the beach was devoid of serious consequences. The weather of the early morning gave little promise of a pleasant day, and a short-lived fall of rain, which did not continue long enough to wet the sidewalks, was not of a cheering nature. However, the clouds and mist were dissipated early and the sun came out in a clear sky before noon. It was not so warm as the two preceding days, a cooling northerly wind tempering the heat and making it an ideal day for outings and outdoor pleasure—and that is what every one wishes for the Fourth of July.

The official program was carried out in its various features, except the balloon ascensions, which were hindered by the off-shore wind, the afternoon ascension being delayed nearly two hours and the evening exhibition being abandoned. The parade in the morning was excellent, the troops from Fort Adams and the apprentice seamen from the Naval Training Station being the feature. It was over early and everybody had opportunity to go elsewhere and to give their time to other pleasures. The sports and ball games attracted good-sized crowds, the fireworks exhibition drew large numbers to the beach, but did not give such general satisfaction as former exhibitions by the city committee, and there was much disappointment over the disarrangement of the program of balloon ascensions. Finally the band concerts, from 9 to 11 o'clock, gave many the opportunity for a quiet and enjoyable closing of the day.

The Crowds.

There were good-sized crowds in the streets, many coming by steamboat and trolley from out of town, the beach was well patronized during the day and evening, and there were many bathers. Many of the residents of Newport sought a quiet day in picnics in the country. There was less noise than usual, the absence of the cannon firecrackers, explosive canes and dangerous cannons being a notable feature and while there were plenty of the smaller firecrackers during the day and fireworks in the evening, there were no accidents from this source. The firemen had numerous calls but little to do, and though there was one slight accident there was not serious damage. There were many automobile parties in the city and the hotels, boarding-houses and restaurants did a good business during the holidays.

The celebration began with a salute by the Newport Artillery gun squad at sunrise, but there was no ringing of bells and those who were awakened by the guns were not kept awake by a half hour's clanging, and had a chance for an early morning nap. The younger generation, however, was out early, with the evident intention of getting all they could out of the day. In the early morning there was a bustling of marketmen and grocerymen to deliver their orders and business was lively for the first hours of the day, the shops being closed generally at 10 o'clock, except those which cater to the holiday trade.

At noon the Newport Artillery fired a full national salute of 48 guns, honoring the two new states, although they are not yet entitled to stars in the flags. Salutes were also fired from Fort Adams and the Naval Training Station at noon.

The ships at the Station—the Constellation, Reina Mercedes, Cumberland and Boxer—were dressed in honor of the holiday, and the yachts in the harbor were also in full holiday dress. Flags were generally flying from the steamboats and vessels in the harbor and from public and private staffs in the city. There was apparently a more general display of flags from private residences than usual.

The sports, including the base ball games, and athletic contests at Morton Park kept the crowd scattered during the early afternoon. Later the proposed balloon ascension attracted many to Easton's beach and the cutter and boat races drew a small number of spectators to the upper harbor front. The fireworks exhibition at the beach and the band concerts closed the public celebration.

The parade.

The parade started promptly on time, Colonel King, the chief marshal, giving the order to move at 10 o'clock. The line consisted of four companies of the coast artillery corps from Fort Adams and Fort Greble, under the command of Captain Smith, with Lieutenant Phipps as adjutant; 12 companies of apprentice seamen from the Naval Training Station, under command of Lieutenant Frank T. Evans; the Newport Artillery, under Lieutenant Colonel A. A. Sherman, and carriages containing the Board of Alder-

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

FRED W. GREENE, AUCTIONEER.
1 Broadway, Newport.

Commissioner's Sale.

BY VIRTUE of the authority in me vested by a decree of the Superior Court of the State of Rhode Island, in that cause in equity entitled Charles S. Bush, et al. against Edwin A. Bush, et al., No. 1213, the undersigned will sell at public auction on the premises on TUESDAY, JULY 12th, 1910, at 12 o'clock noon.

I. That certain lot or parcel of land situated in the City of Newport at the Northeast corner of West Broadway and Edward Street, bounded and described as follows. Beginning at said corner, thence extending in a northwesterly direction along the easterly line of Edward Street, 106 feet more or less, to land now or formerly of Charles E. Peckham and John Nelson, thence turning and extending in a northeasterly direction, bounding northwesterly on land of said Peckham and Nelson 60 feet more or less to other land of the estate of Joseph L. Bush, thence turning and extending in a southeasterly direction, bounding northeasterly on other land of the estate of Joseph L. Bush 74 feet, more or less, to the northwesterly line of West Broadway, thence turning and extending in a southwesterly direction, bounding southeasterly on said West Broadway 67 feet, more or less, to the point or place of beginning, and containing by estimation about 7,864 sq. ft. of land. Or however, otherwise described, is that same parcel of land described in that deed of a half interest therein from John Munn to Thomas Bush dated February 8th, 1816, and recorded in the City Clerk's office in Newport in book 13 at page 162.

II. A certain lot or parcel of land situate on the northwesterly side of West Broadway in the City of Newport, bounded and described as follows, to wit:—Beginning at the southerly corner of said lot, thence extending in a Northwesterly direction, bounding Westerly and northwesterly on other land of the Estate of Joseph L. Bush, and land now or formerly of Charles E. Peckham and John Nelson, and land now or formerly of George A. Weaver, and land now or formerly of Peter F. Clark, 229 feet 10 inches, more or less, thence turning and extending in a northeasterly direction, bounding northwesterly on land of Timothy Tierney, 41 feet 9 inches, thence turning and extending in a southeasterly direction, bounding southeasterly on land now or formerly of Carolina Pasquaretti, and land now or formerly of Daniel and Johanna O'Brien, and other land of the estate of Joseph L. Bush, 215 feet 6 inches, more or less, to the Northwesterly line of West Broadway, thence turning and running in a westerly direction, bounding southeasterly on West Broadway, 70 feet more or less, to the point or place of beginning. Said lot contains 10,576 sq. ft. of land, more or less, and however otherwise described, it is the same parcel described in that deed of a half interest therein from George A. Simmons to John T. Bush, dated January 21st, 1865, and recorded in the City Clerk's Office in said Newport in Book 31, page 212.

III. A certain lot or parcel of land situate in the city of Newport on the northwesterly side of West Broadway, bounded and described as follows. Beginning at the Southerly corner of said lot, thence extending in a northerly direction, bounding northwesterly on other land of the estate of Joseph L. Bush, 116 feet 9 inches to the land now or formerly of Daniel and Johanna O'Brien, thence turning and extending in a northeasterly direction, bounding northwesterly on said land of Daniel and Johanna O'Brien, 59 feet to the westerly side of Tilden Avenue, thence turning and extending in a southeasterly direction, bounding northeasterly on said Tilden Avenue, to the northwest line of West Broadway, 113 feet 9 inches, thence turning and extending in a northwesterly direction bounding southeasterly on West Broadway 58 feet 9 inches more or less, to the point or place of beginning. Said lot contains 6,882 sq. ft. of land, and however otherwise bounded and described, is that lot of land described in a certain deed from Wm. H. Simmons et al. to John T. Bush, dated October 25th, 1869, and recorded in the city clerk's office in Newport in Book 11 at page 599.

The undersigned will also sell at public auction on the premises on Tuesday, July 12, 1910 at 11 A. M.

IV. A certain lot or parcel of land with all the buildings and improvements thereon standing, on the Northwesterly side of Broadway in the City of Newport, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at the Southerly corner of said lot, thence extending in a northwesterly direction, bounding westerly on land now or formerly of Mary H. Horgan, 150 feet 6 inches to land of Patrick H Horgan, thence turning and extending in a northeasterly direction, bounding northwesterly on land now or formerly of Patrick H. Horgan, 36 feet to other land of the estate of Joseph L. Bush; thence turning and extending in a southeasterly direction, bounding easterly on other land of the Estate of Joseph L. Bush and land now or formerly of Frank H. Holt and Mary S. Langdon, 150 feet 6 inches to the northwest line of Broadway; thence turning and extending in a southwesterly direction 34 feet, bounding southeasterly on Broadway, to the point or place of beginning. Said lot contains by estimation, 5,300 square feet of land.

Said lot contains about 6,606 square feet of land, and is the same premises described in a deed from Augustus Bush to John T. Bush dated July 7, 1853, and recorded in the office of the City Clerk in Newport in Book 31, page 38.

By virtue of the above authority, the undersigned will also sell at public auction on the premises on WEDNESDAY, JULY 13th, 1910, at 11 o'clock A. M.

VIII. A certain lot of land situate partly in the City of Newport and partly in the Town of Middletown, containing by estimation about 5¼ acres more or less, bounded on the North by Vernon Avenue, on the West by land of the Old Colony Street Railway Company, on the South by land now or formerly of Perry W. Freeborn and Philip Caswell Jr., and on the East by land now or formerly of William C. Cozzens.

Said lot is known as the Border lot, and is the same land described in that deed from Thomas R. Bush to John T. Bush dated April 17, 1868, and recorded in the office of the City Clerk in Newport in book 40, page 498.

Power is given said commissioner to adjourn such sale from time to time.

Terms, 10 per cent down at time of sale; balance within three days after purchaser is notified that deed is ready for delivery.
